Martin Advocates Laws That would Curb Profiteers

Attorney Ivan G. Martin, who is special representative of the Broad-street company for Marion county, stated in an interview today that it is believed by commercial authorities that economic conditions will justify and force a reduction in the prices of most commodities during this year, and advises that merchants buy carefully. This does not mean, however, those commodities on which speculators and profiteers may have a monopoly, Mr. Martin said.

"While it is to be regretted that such methods should be required, yet I believe," said Mr. Martin, "that it will be necessary to deal with the profiteer with more stringent laws."

"I have a friend," he said, "who is employed at the docks in San Francisco from whom I yesterday received a letter stating that many ships were arriving loaded with sugar and that is the general opinion that there is no real necessity or justification for the present price of sugar. This gentleman reported that sugar was selling in San Francisco for 30 cents per pound and that he claims that high prices were caused by either the inability to load and unload ships or a real shortage was unfounded."

"In my opinion," said Mr. Martin, "drastic regulations should be enforced to prevent hoarding of commodities and profiteering. Such commercial piracy is largely responsible for abnormal prices not only of labor but also of all necessities and is therefore a factor in the high taxes of our county and state."

"While sugar is a flagrant example yet profiteering is not confined to sugar. It was the loan shark, the interest profiteer who made it necessary for the enactment of usury laws making it unlawful to charge more than 12 per cent for the use of money. It will be carrying out the same idea to provide that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to make more than a certain percent on certain commodities and the consumer will doubtless demand some such regulation in the event that dealers continue to corner markets and charge unreasonable prices."

Jane Lucy Sacy Dies Here Today
