

Taft Holds Delay of Treaty Due to Action of Senate

"A mere difference of words." In this manner, William Howard Taft, former president of the United States who lectured at the Salem armory, Saturday night, characterized the Senate's delay of over a year in adopting the league of nations program.

Extolls League

The ex-president had much to say for the league and proved point by point that it was the most efficient and substantial covenant ever framed for the prevention of war. He referred often to the stubborn resistance that the plan has encountered from a small coterie in the senate and asserted that this coterie of sixteen men have succeeded in thwarting the progress of the major portion of congress and popular sentiment favoring the league.

He outlined article X, the bone of contention in the tremendous plan and stated that he saw no objection to its adoption as it would only obligate the United States to do what more than forty other nations have agreed to do, and that is "bear our share in the operation of the league."

Reservations Halt Plan

Mr. Taft also took the stand that the reservations to the league, as amended by the various reservations would never be adopted until a new president assumed the duties of office. This left the audience in the dark as to the speaker's intent; as he failed to outline any qualification other than intimating that the prospective president should be a man who would stand for any manner of reservations to the league. "Better an amended league than none," said the speaker.

On the subject of the reservations, Mr. Taft elicited much laughter and applause when he stated that "there seems to be a slight amount of coldness between the president and the senate."

This state of affairs arises from action of the senate in adopting the wording "concurrent" rather than the original phraseology of "joint act" of the executive powers of the United States in acting upon questions that might arise after America became a member of the league. "This change in the intent of the covenant pertaining to national functioning of the plan, robs the chief executive of any vote in subsequent action," declared Mr. Taft.

League is Weakened

In outlining the reservations, Mr. Taft showed that these detracted from the power of the covenant, especially in the clause whereby the United States reserves the right to arm in case of war and to act independent of any action of the supreme council. Another stand taken by the reservationists is termed as "cheap" by the former president. This is the paragraph where the United States is asked to be excused from paying its share of administrative expenses of the league.

Article X Acceptable

Referring again to article X, Mr. Taft stated that it was only a mutual guaranty by the nations in the league to stand by and to protect each other against predatory nations or violators of the agreement. This was provided for by a mutual police force that would only require a small percentage of the armament now maintained by the leading powers. The purpose of the league is dependent upon this functioning, stated the ex-president.

Mr. Taft extolled the league as the answer to the prayer of all nations for cessation of the eternal race for armament, which, he stated, led to all wars of aggression. He referred to Germany's military preparations for the great war as an example of what occurs when there is not a stabilizing medium such as that afforded by the league.

Boycott is Weapon

He stated that article XVI served the purpose of article X, even if the latter was rendered inoperative by American reservations. Article XVI is a terrible weapon placed in the hands of members of the league. Should any nation in the league violate its agreements and start an unprovoked war; the combined strength of the other nations is directed against the offender. A boycott of infinite scope is put into operation and the offender finds itself isolated and weakened by a weapon more efficient than any death dealing machine could be, stated Mr. Taft.

In finally stating that the reservations were to be found more acceptable than no agreement of any kind, Mr. Taft stated that action is needed now. "The peace of the world is trembling in the balance, and behold we become a growing threat, while the American senate dwells along at great public expense does nothing," summarized the speaker.

Delay Perilous

With the league in virtual operation at the present time, any attitude for further delay on our part would work against us and would finally isolate America from the plan of peace, according to Mr. Taft. "We shall speed the time when America shall become a member of the league," concluded Mr. Taft.

Mr. Taft was introduced to the audience that crowded the armory, by Governor O'Connell, who warmly welcomed the visitor.

In addition to Governor O'Connell, the following were members of the party that was seated on the speakers platform: Dean George H. Alden of Willamette university; Justices Henry J. Bean, Henry L. Benson and George H. Burnett of the supreme court; Thomas B. Kay, President W. T. Vinson of the state senate; Speaker Seymour Jones of the house of representatives and Mayor O. J. Wilson.

Notion Pays Tribute To Children in Line

Bellingham, Wash., May 31.—Five thousand persons are expected to march in the Memorial day parade here this afternoon. School children, fraternal and patriotic organizations will join with the veterans of three wars in making the parade a success. Judge John A. Kellogg will deliver the address of the day at Liberty hall and flowers will be strewn on Bellingham in honor of the nation's naval hero.

Albany Loses Good Game to Salem in Two Hours Battle

The Senators are getting better all the time. This seemed to be the consensus of opinion of the fans as they left Oxford park Sunday, following the game in which Salem defeated Albany by a 6-4 score.

Perhaps the anticipation of a stern game with the Kirkpatricks Monday, caused the local boys to fumble a few more plays than good form would permit. Then again, cupid had been lodging in and out of the Senate ranks lately, furnishing another, "there's a reason" factor.

The play opened up lively from the start. In the first inning, the Senators went after Coon with a penchant for trouble. Gill walked, Holmes sacrificed him to second; Proctor placed him on third. In an effort to catch Proctor at first, Coon overthrew Michaels, Gill scoring and Proctor going to second. Proctor then stole third and scored on Hayes' single to center. In the third inning Proctor went out, Gittens to Michael, Hayes got a pass to first, went to second on a pass ball and scored on Miller's single down the right field foul line.

Salem had no sooner nailed up these scores than the visitors started to tear down the good record, the game being nip and tuck to the finish. Albany's hard scrapping entitled them to victory; but just as soon as the Lin county warriors threatened to score, Bishop tightened up and put the frost on their pumpkin.

As a twirler, Bishop surprised the fans. His work reminded local followers of the game that Biddle is a versatile creature whether at first, third, or as manager. The Senators worked slowly, taking no chances on injuring themselves for the hard game with the Kirks, Monday.

Stage Line Adds New G.M.C. Truck

The traveling public that jaunts between Independence and Monmouth are enjoying a brand new bus. It came rolling up the road just as the Monmouth school teachers and many of their pupils were returning home after their day's work. They saw it heave in sight and immediately set up a chorus of hurrahs, as it had been promised to them for some time. They climbed aboard amid exclamations of delight, leaving the old conveyance standing discarded like an old shoe. Dan Burns, who has delivered the new bus, gathered up the old one and returned it. The new conveyance is the property of Raymond E. Derby. It is a large, modern, roomy affair, built according to his own specifications and mounted on a speedy GMC chassis.

Water Permits

Application for permission to appropriate water from Rough and Reacy creek for placer mining in Josephine county was filed with the state engineer's office here today by the R. & R. Placer company of Hoquiam.

Other applications for water rights were filed as follows:

By Sarah Stevans of Dayville, covering the appropriation of water from Cabin creek for the irrigation of 40 acres of land in Grant county. By May Barry of Possil, covering the appropriation of water from the John Day river for irrigation of a small tract in Wheeler county. By Harry Read of Possil, covering the appropriation of water from Day river for the irrigation of a small tract in Wheeler county.

Colorado Meet Is Of Interest To Local Libraries

The Salem Public library is looking forward with interest to the forty-second annual conference of the American Library association, to be held June 2 to 7 at Colorado Springs, Colorado. The yearly gathering which draws attendance from four thousand librarian members and from the public, college and institutional libraries of the United States and Canada, will have special significance next month, as it will occur at the height of the association's "Books for Everybody" movement.

Librarians of the nation, following the conclusion of their war work of providing library service for the fighting forces, to which the local library contributed by raising money and collecting books, realized more than ever the extreme need for library extension throughout large sections of the United States, emphasized by requests for assistance from ex-service men who had returned to home communities without public libraries. Plans for the enlarged program of the A. L. A. were first formulated at the 1919 conference at Ashbury Park, N. J. and have since evolved into a broad project for making public library service a vital influence in every American community and an institution through which self-education will be possible for every American.

Service Series At Fairgrounds Start Tuesday, June 1st

Tuesday, June 1, is the date of the opening of the Seventh Day Adventists camp meeting at the fair grounds. This is the eighteenth annual meeting held in Salem and an old fashioned gospel revival is assured by those who are working for its success.

Those in charge of the camp are looking forward to this meeting expecting it to be the best in the history of the conference.

All the tents owned by the conference are already taken, and other tents are being shipped in from Portland. Evangelist A. R. Bell, pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist church of this city, who is holding a very successful series of Sunday night meetings, will transfer all his activities to the camp ground, and the church will be closed until the camp meeting is over.

There will be preaching three times daily besides Bible studies. Every service of the camp will be devoted entirely to spiritual interests, to which the people of Salem are cordially invited. The evening service of each day of the encampment will be arranged especially for the general public, and topics of vital interest and importance will be presented by their best speakers. The

Professor Potter Honored
Corvallis, May 31.—E. L. Potter, professor of animal husbandry at O. A. C., will receive the master of science degree from the Iowa state college at commencement this year. This honor was voted by the faculty on the basis of many years of distinguished success at the Oregon institution. Professor Potter left for Ames, seat of the Iowa college, from Burns, where he attended the cattle and horse raisers' annual meet. He will visit some of the leading experiment stations of the United States while on the journey, and expects to reach home about June 15.
