Monmouth for Changed Route State Highway

Monmouth, Or., June 1.—There is one section of Polk county where the proposal to restore the original route of the West Side Pacific highway in the county does not meet with favor. This is the section in and around Monmouth and especially that part which lies to the south and southwest of the city. This section which in 1913 produced over 500,000 bushels of wheat and is reputed to be as fertile a farming country as there is in the state of Oregon, feels that it has an especial grievance with Dallas and Independence at this time, charging them with not keeping faith with the rest of the county. This charge arises in the following manner:

At the time the decision of the highway commission for a direct route through the county was announced last spring a mass meeting was called and held in the court house in Dallas, participated in by representatives of all sections of the county. The meeting accepted the decision of the commission and prepared a program of highways for the county, with the highway as the main artery and paved post roads leading to it. It was agreed to ask the voters of the county to authorize $265,000 in bonds, which was the county limit, to carry out this program. Monmouth and the country to the south known as the Elkins-Luckiamute section, were given no recognition in this program, other than the fact that the main highway was to serve them. It was soon to appear they stood a chance of losing that through a trick.

As adopted by the meeting $40,000 was appropriated to meet the expense of preparing the main highway from the Amity-Solmes Gap section south through Monmouth, by way of the Helmick bridge and skirting the Wheeler hill to the Benton county line. When the county bonding project appeared in the election notice it was observed that all the rest of the projects were described as the meeting had agreed to them except the main highway. That was described by giving the place of entrance to the county following thence south to the Benton line without specifying where the route was to be located in the county. The Monmouth-Elkins-Luckiamute section quickly detected this change in the description of the part of the measure they were interested in. But their faith was in the highway commission. That body had shown itself broad-minded and fair but alert to the necessities of action. It was felt the route was safe with them although the hostility of the county court was apparent. Therefore there was nothing half hearted in the bond this section gave the bonds helping in the election in early June.

Thus having renounced the highway and accepted such concessions as their self-sacrifice entitled them in the way of adjustments and division of county road work, Dallas and Independence now propose to get the main highway away. This proposal leaves the Elkins-Luckiamute country with what they think is a just grievance. For if they lose the highway, no other provision was made for them in the county bond issue project.

Therefore, to state they are sore, is not it mildly. Dissatisfaction ripens into denunciation. Strong language is heard and counter measures are being sorted over for the elimination of the least violent. There is division now in Polk county and to what heights it will rise or to distance extend can not be told until the end of the chapter.

He died within twenty-four hours.

Special Service For Anniversary Of Pastor Planned

(By the country editor) Fifty years ago, on Sunday, July 4th, Rev. Joel J. Jochlyn, a pioneer minister of the Oregon Methodist conference, now living in Canby as a supernumerary, preached his first sermon in a little church at Rock Creek in Clackamas county. He was then but a little past the age of maturity. During the early history of Methodism in Oregon Rev. Jochlyn was an enterprising and distinguished member of the Methodist conference, and he helped to lay the great foundation for the work that is now being accomplished. But he was more than all these—he was a citizen of noblest instincts and most irreproachable life, an elegant and spirited gentleman whose name and service deserve at the hands of his associates something better than even partial oblivion. Yet not unlike most of his contemporaries, he is measurably forgotten and to many of his generation unknown, even in the churches of his former pastorate for which he served and sacrificed much in laying the foundations of their present prosperity. It is a sad commentary on human life that those who build noble superstructures on foundations laid by others with lavish cost of means and effort, are prone to forget the men who made their own much boasted achievements possible. They are not unlike the fable swine that eat the fat acorns found in the grass without ever looking up the tree which bore them. But there is a high authority for the statement that "all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower fadeth away."

Mt. Angel, June 1.—The Mt. Angel baseball team was defeated in a lively game played here Sunday afternoon between the home team and Waconda. The score was 6 to 4. This is the second defeat Mt. Road Work Near Aurora Rushed

Aurora, Or., June 1.—The good roads program inaugurated by the Marion county court and the state highway commission is intended to cover a wide scope of territory tributary to Aurora. The county officials are arduously making the same sort of improvement on the road across the river between here and Barlow. This is the route to Portland that will likely be paved next season, and will be traveled almost entirely by tourists as soon as put in good condition. It is said to be a mile nearer than the road now used.

Hubbard Loses Teacher Holding Banner Record

Hubbard, Or., June 1.—Miss Beardsley, a graduate of the Oregon normal school at Monmouth, who for the past three terms has been teacher at the White school house near here, has accepted a position as teacher in a school south of here, and has resigned her position here. The excellent work she has accomplished and her general personality, has raised the whole community spirit to such a standard that her school has taken the honor flag for three successive terms, which was given by the County Parent-Teachers' association. The school still maintains the honor flag which was won at the recent meeting held in Salem. It was through her efforts that the box social recently held in the White school was such a marked success and provided money sufficient to replace a phonograph stolen from the school building some time ago. While Hubbard regrets that she has decided to make this change, all are delighted over her promotion.

Late Frosts Hurt Orchards States County Inspector

Silverton, Or., June 1.—Fruit Inspector S. H. Van Trump was here from Salem yesterday inspecting some of the fruit and nut orchards in this vicinity. Mr. Van Trump said he finds many trees killed, which a couple of weeks ago seemed to be in vigorous condition. He says it has been the worst spring he has ever seen since he has been in Oregon. Frosts several nights last week, he stated, has done much damage to fruits and vegetable plants and in his opinion there will be a scarcity of both and prevailing high prices next fall. Mr. Van Trump visited the Beck peach orchard while in this vicinity. He claims that Beck Bros., in cutting off the tops of trees injured by the freeze, are pursuing the only right course. These stumps, he claims, will produce suckers which will bear fruit in a year or two.

Brooks-Salem Paving Is Half Completed Now

Brooks, Or., June 1.—Work is rapidly progressing on the unpaved portion of the Pacific highway between here and Salem. Nearly half of the distance has been covered since the operations were resumed a couple of weeks ago, and it is expected that the work will be completed by the middle of June. With this completion the highway will be wholly paved between Portland and Salem except a short distance between Aurora and Canby. This, it is said, will not be finished until next season.
