Oregon Observations

Portland—An outdoor boxing meet planned for the afternoon of June 22 as a feature of the Shrine week entertainment here, was abandoned today by the boxing commission, following cancellation by Benny Leonard of his contract to appear in the main event against Johnny Sheppard.

Portland—Charles White, said to be a parole violator from the Oregon penitentiary, was arrested Monday charged with passing a forged check for $200 on the Brownsville Woolen Mills company at its home office in Brownsville. Detectives declared White was about to put under way a well organized plan for a big cleanup during the Shrine convention.

Eugene—Frank R. Houghton was arrested here Monday on the charge of grand larceny preferred at Walla Walla, Wash., by a piano firm. It is alleged that Houghton was engaged to work by this firm and he was sent $200 while at Oakland, Cal., as advance wages. After reaching Walla Walla he worked three days and quit his job, and it is charged that he kept the remainder of the money advanced after he had paid his railroad fare from Oakland to Walla Walla.

Portland—Full naval honors will be paid today to Lieutenant Louis T. Barin, Portland aviator who was killed Saturday near San Diego, at services to be held at the North Island naval air station, San Diego, Cal., according to word received here today. Following the services at the air station, where Lieutenant Barin lost his life, the body will be taken to Oregon City near here, where final services will be held probably Friday afternoon.

Baker—Infection following the bite of a sage tick caused the death at Long Creek, Or., of Emmett Barr last Saturday, according to word brought here today. The sage tick had buried itself in Barr's body and its extraction by a surgeon failed to save the victim.

Portland—Anna Gabriel, Creole woman, aged 29, was arrested by Detectives Swennes and McCulloch as she alighted from a train in compliance with a telegraphic request by the authorities of Hillsboro.

O. A. C. Honored In Federal Report

Washington, June 14.—Annual inspection of leading colleges and schools of the country which conduct reserve officers training units, show that the grade of military instruction is "decidedly more thorough and of higher quality than ever before in the history of our country," said an announcement today by the war department.

CRANCE OF A LIFE TIME
When I was sick, with chills and fever, Jones did my chores, day after day; he whacked up kindling with a cleaver, and fed the cow and hens their hay. I told him he was sure a treasure, a model neighbor, nothing less; he said it always gave him pleasure to help a comrade in distress.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.

Every Oregon republican ought to be up in arms at the shabby treatment accorded Colonel Piper, editor of Portland's leading newspaper and "unofficial leader" of the republican party in Oregon, at the Chicago convention. Colonel Piper some time since, wrote the platform for the party and went to Chicago to name the ticket—yet apparently his counsel was unheeded and his commands ignored.

Not only does the platform repudiate the Piper peace proposals, but it endorses the treaty-be-damned stand of Piper's pet aversion, Hell-roarin' Hiram, and forces the Oregonian to stultify itself throughout the campaign. However, the platform contains as much partisan persiflage, as many dreary platitudes and an almost equal amount of old-time humkerism as Piper's own composition—which is going some, and at the same time, some comfort.

To add insult to injury, it is apparent from the varacious, somewhat prosaic and altogether guileless reports of proceedings the editor wired his paper, that Oregon's peerless leader was not even taken into the confidence of the party bosses—he couldn't find them and hence reported that they didn't exist. Though a brilliant strategist himself, he was entirely unconscious of the strategy of the Old Guard, and they pulled it off under his nose without his finding it out—and he thought he was IT.

Another correspondent, Mark Sullivan, who was not a party leader, platform builder and great editor, merely a newspaper reporter, in the same issues of the Oregonian, first forecasted the result and then tells how it happened—so that Mr. Piper, when he returns home, by consulting the back files of his paper, can learn what really happened at Chicago.—Better late than never—yet when ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise.

REJECTION OF HOOVER.

Herbert Hoover ran third in the Literary Digest's national poll of a million and a half votes for the presidency. His support came from both parties and indicated his strength. Yet Hoover was not seriously considered by the republican convention, and those who presented him were subjected to discourtesies. His popularity among the people was attested by the prolonged demonstration in his favor by the galleries, which contrasted sharply with the artificial demonstrations for the leading candidates, yet it found no echo among the delegates.

Hoover was rejected by the convention despite the fact that his nomination spelled election, because the politicians in control of the party feared him. They knew that he would be a real president, and they feared that the organization would be ignored, and the administration be conducted along lines of business efficiency instead of political expediency. Hoover had classified himself as an independent progressive with republican leanings—and a reactionary party hack was wanted.

Hoover was the only candidate presented the convention who had the economic experience and world statesmanship, the knowledge of nations and of peoples, the demonstrated ability as organizer and administrator, to solve the problems presented by the international crisis confronting the nation—when industry and commerce are demoralized, taxation unexampled, credits exhausted and nations facing famine and bankruptcy. He was the only candidate who offered something besides platitudes and demagoguery and old-fashioned bunk, and these were most unacceptable to the politicians.

Rippling Rhymes

When I was sick, with chills and fever, Jones did my chores, day after day; he whacked up kindling with a cleaver, and fed the cow and hens their hay. I told him he was sure a treasure, a model neighbor, nothing less; he said it always gave him pleasure to help a comrade in distress. Recovered from my ills and sorrows, I changed my mind concerning Jones; for every day he comes and borrows, a gun, an egg, or seven bones. He borrows till he makes me dizzy, and I am drooping o'er my lyre; he borrows gas for his tin Lizzie, and wood to feed his kitchen fire.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

By the Noted Author IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

Charles and I Dine
I do not know just when my illusions changed into dreams. In fact, I do not think I did dream after I went to sleep. I only know that when Hannah called me saying that Charles had come to supper I was surprised, for I seemed to have just stepped out of dreamland, and the vision of Karl writing was still very vivid.

When I looked in the mirror I found the traces of tears had all gone from my face. With a few little touches I knew I was looking as well as possible under the circumstances, and I went down to meet Charles.

"My, but you are looking well," he said when I entered the room. And then I knew that he had been thinking that I had not been looking well for some time past. But he had not mentioned it to me as John had.

Strange, isn't it, that those who love us most are the ones who feel at perfect liberty to tell us unpleasant truths, while those who know us least are always polite in keeping the unflattering things from us and in telling us only the nice things. If we were half as polite to those we love as we are to our acquaintances what a delightful world this would be!

Never Mentioned John
Charles never mentioned John during the entire evening. When I went downstairs Hannah told me that supper was on the table. She not only had strawberry shortcake, but delicious asparagus cooked in just the way that mother used to cook it.

And over the supper table we had a "reminiscence party" and talked of all the joyous times that he and I had had together as children, and what foolish childish things he had done and laughed at.

"Do you remember," he said, "the time when as a very young girl you insisted upon Fred Morton always bringing you home from our little dances, and how angry it made me? Poor Fred used to get more beatings at my hands than any other boy I knew. I used to lay in wait for him when he was coming back from taking you home, and when I would beat him up."

"Did you do that, Charles? I have often wondered why it was that Fred did not seem over-anxious to be nice to me when I cared for him so much. I felt very much hurt when he stopped asking to take me home. I never knew the reason until now."

That Was the Reason
"That was the reason, all right," said Charles. "You see, Katherine, at that time I thought that you really belonged to me and that some time you would marry me."

And then he stopped.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

THE TALE OF JASPER JAY

BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

JASPER'S BOAST.
Jasper Jay had said nothing to anyone concerning the horrid call, which had sounded twice—each time at midday. But now that he felt sure the strange bird whose cry he had heard must have come to live in "There it is!" Jasper cried. Pleasant Valley, he could no longer keep from mentioning the matter.

Chancing to meet his cousin, Mr. Crow, the next morning, Jasper stopped to talk with the old gentleman. You see, Mr. Crow was widely known as a gossip. He usually knew what was going on in the neighborhood. So Jasper thought it likely that Mr. Crow could tell him all about the unwelcome stranger.

Of course, Jasper never termed his cousin a scamp to his face. He always spoke to him very politely, greeting him as "Mr. Crow," in spite of their close relationship. And there was a reason why Jasper did that. Mr. Crow had once given him a severe beating because Jasper had called him something else. And Jasper Jay never forgot it.

Now Jasper first inquired after his cousin's health. He did that to put old Mr. Crow in a good humor. But Jasper was sorry at once that he had started Mr. Crow talking about his ills. It happened that the old gentleman was then suffering from gout, hay-fever and housemaid's knee. And he liked to talk about his ailments. Living all alone as he did, he had nobody to do his housework. And immediately for some of these structures.

The college will particularly have in mind the housing situation in order to care for the increase in enrollment expected in the fall term. The home economics building has been inadequate to meet growing needs of this division for a long time and effort will be made to give relief as soon as possible.

The board authorized the purchase of small plots of ground on college hill on which options have been taken.

Portland Police Search For Man Believed Slain

Portland, Or., June 14.—Police here today were searching for Harry Dubinsky, owner of a for-hire auto, who has been missing since Saturday night. Dubinsky's auto was found late last night, but oneman stained with blood and the license tags missing. A brother had reported to the police earlier in the day that Dubinsky was missing.

The police are of the opinion that some one who hired the car may have killed him and hidden the body. Indications of a struggle were evident when the car was found, it was said.

Bubonic Plague Spreads, Report

Washington, June 14.—Spread of the bubonic plague to Tampico, Mexico, was reported to the state department today by the American consul at that port. The first case proved fatal and the consul has been asked to obtain aid.

Arrival of medical supplies at Vera Cruz from the United States was reported by the American consul there, who stated that out of 24 cases of bubonic plague, 23 had proved fatal. Mexican federal authorities have destroyed railway tracks for five miles on all lines leading out of the city.

Striking Tailors Return.
San Francisco, June 14.—Union tailors were reported by certain shop executives to have returned to work today after remaining out on strike since September 1. The men are returning

USE COCOAUNT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR
If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisided coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get multisided coconut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family his remark would not please Jasper all the more peevish. Jay, Jasper gave his cousin an angry glance; and he looked as if he would have liked to fight him. But he had suffered one beating by his elderly cousin. And he didn't care for another. So he only sneezed openly. And then he screamed in a loud voice: "I'll find that nosey fellow and drive him out of Pleasant Valley, if it takes me all summer to do it!"

And he raised his crest, and snapped his beak together and stamped his feet, so that he looked very fierce indeed. But old Mr. Crow was not frightened in the least. He only smiled. "Let me know when you've driven the stranger away," he said.

"Oh! you'll hear about it!" Jasper Jay assured him. "It will be the most famous fight that will ever take place in this valley," he boasted. And then the two cousins parted. It did not put Jasper Jay in any better humor to hear Mr. Crow's hoarse howl echoing across the valley. Of course, Jasper did not know what he was laughing at. But that only served to make the blue-coated scamp

No Sugar

Required for Jiffy-Jell Desserts

They come ready-sweetened. They come acidulated with pure fruit acid, made from lemons or from grapes. A bottle of liquid fruit flavor comes in each package. We crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it in a bottle. So Jiffy-Jell is a real-fruit dainty, rich in fruit.

Simply add boiling water as directed on package, then the fruit essence from the bottle, and let cool. If you used fresh fruit, plus a lot of sugar, you could make nothing more delicious.

Serves six—at trifling cost. One package of Jiffy-Jell serves six in mold form, or twelve if you whip the jell. And the fruit alone which we use in it would cost you more than the whole dessert.

Jiffy-Jell Real-Fruit Desserts

Ten Flavors in Glass Vials. A bottle like this in each package.

- Mint Lime Cherry
Raspberry Loganberry
Strawberry Pineapple
Orange Lemon Coffee

Be sure to get this package from your grocer, for Jiffy-Jell is the only dessert with these liquid fruit flavors in vials.
