School System To Severe For Women, Claim

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Or., July 10.—That women are being simply "dumped" into an educational system in this country built on a man basis was the declaration of Dr. Carolus Hedger of Chicago, medical director of the Elizabeth McCormack memorial fund for the improvement of the physical condition of children, who gave a series of addresses before summer session students.

"This system wasn't adapted or altered," said Doctor Hedger. "We were just thrown in alive to sink or swim, survive or perish. Many of us perished, but we made good mentally."

"If the tension continues to increase, we won't have posterity worth making the world safe for. Year after year the machine becomes more intricate, more compressed. Extra after extra has been added until the mental and social requirements of our high school children are appalling. It is the business of parents to save their children, particularly their girls, from the educational machine."
