World's Champion Light Six

$1000 Challenge

In February, 1917, the Elgin Motor Car Corporation offered to donate $1,000 to any worthy charity, if any other car on the market could be found at around the same price which could equal the Elgin Six in value.

This challenge was published as a full page advertisement in all Chicago Sunday newspapers, in order to prove that the Elgin Six was the greatest car value on the market. The decision was to rest with a jury of five, composed of an automobile engineering expert, a manufacturer of automobile parts, a high class automobile dealer, a well known artist, and a representative Chicago business man.

The fact that not a single acceptance to this open challenge was received proves conclusively that no other car built dares to enter competition with the "World's Champion Light Six."
