Do You Drive a Car?

Eyestrain may very easily be aggravated by driving a car. The attempt to focus the eyes on objects which you are passing rapidly irritates the already strained eyes.

Don't give up the car—but have your eyes attended to. Begin by letting us examine them to find out what causes the strain. Good sight is too valuable for your success and comfort to run the slightest risk of impairing it.

Our equipment, together with our skill and experience, enables us to determine exactly the condition and needs of your eyes.

To the Editor:—An enclosing a recent letter from my son Delwin, who is now with the aviation section of the army and stationed in Texas. This might interest Salem boys who are interested in joining avroline branches of the service, and that you would publish a portion or all of it for their benefit. Respectfully, W. H. Williams.

August 6, 1920—Dear Folks: Have been watching "Sooty" and six others make ready to go up for an altitude flight. There are seven passengers in a two passenger plane and they have just gone out of sight. They were certainly dressed funny. They took off all their clothing and were wrapped in paper to about twice their normal size. When the paper covering was completed bandages were placed on neck, arms and head and wool stockings were donned. They went up at 4:30 this morning and are expected to return about 8:30.

Our barracks has just been painted and with its green and white trimmings is rather attractive. Buildings are all newly painted and with flowers all around, the camp looks O. K. Will try to send a picture later.

Later:—"Sooty," whose last name is Brown, has just returned with his party. They broke the world altitude passenger record this morning and I will send the papers when it is announced. Will write more later.

August 7.—Just got off guard and jam pretty sleepy. It always rains whenever I have to stand guard. Last night I was on inner guard and thought that the rain would not bother. During relief I started to sleep on a mattress near the window but woke up when about a half-inch of rain-water covered the mattress, blowing it through the opening. I pulled the mattress over, moved it to the center of the floor and went to sleep again. When I woke up, the rain was coming through a hole in the roof at the rate of six miles per hour. Then decided to stay up till next hour of duty and in looking for my hat found it half full of water. Some night.

Was guarding the prison and every half hour had to go into a big room and count all the prisoners. It is sure the real thing for only the night before a guard was shot while on the same post. Will conclude, tell my Salem friends to write: Delwin Williams, Kelly Field, Texas.

To the Editor:—An editorial in the Oregon Statesman of August 17, after quoting some figures in regard to the amount of sugar imported, goes on to state that "the revenues did not amount to much, because the present Wilson-Underwood tariff (free trade) law reduced the custom charges," etc. During the past winter we have paid as high as 25 cents a pound for sugar and I cannot help wondering how much for we would have had to pay if there had been a high protective tariff. At least we would have had to pay in addition, the amount of the tariff and probably a great deal more as the following would indicate:

One of the foremost authorities upon the American tariff problem, Professor F. W. Hauspie, in the Atlantic Monthly for March, 1918, page 342, estimates that the tariff upon sugar results in an annual tax upon the American consumers of $101,000,000 of which $52,400,000 goes into the treasury and $48,600,000 into the hands of the sugar producers. This estimate was based on conditions as they were in 1908, when we had a high protective tariff. In other words we, the consumers, had to give to the producers of sugar $48,600,000 in order that we return to the treasury revenues to the amount of $52,400,000.

In any method of taxation the consumer has to pay. Then would it not have been better to have raised the $52,400,000 by some approved method of internal taxation and cut our protective tariff, thus saving to the people the $48,600,000 which the protective tariff made possible for the producers to put in their pockets.

Such a condition exists to a greater or lesser degree in the case of any commodity which is protected by a high tariff. The protective tariff, with few exceptions, is for the interest of the few—against the interest of the many.

In speaking of the necessity of the "enactment of a new tariff law with the idea of protection to American industries," this same editorial says: "This will have to be done to save many of our industries from ruin." They failed to mention just what industries they thought would come to ruin, but I suppose they had reference to steel or some similar industry which has always enjoyed the protection of a high tariff. Perhaps if they were to be specific, they would mention the Bethlehem steel works, whose profits are over $1,000,000 a month, or the United States Steel corporation, whose profits are still larger.

It looks as if the author of that editorial just wanted to give his readers a scare when he predicted "labor troubles on a scale heretofore unknown" if we do not get a higher protective tariff and that "we cannot go on paying high wages for labor in the face of competition with the infinitely cheaper labor of China and Japan and India and Europe," for it is a fact that the greater productiveness of the American labor, due to more efficient machinery, greater natural resources and perhaps greater skill, more than offsets the cheaper labor of foreign countries, and therefore, only labor troubles may have will not be due to the lack of a protective tariff.

However, I believe that labor comes in competition only with labor and not with commodities, and therefore has no bearing on tariff questions.

Here's to a continuation of low tariff in the interest of the people.
