

Togs for the Days of Childhood

By Marie Stahl

When you and I were young may have been a number of years ago and then again it may have been but a few. That is not the question to be discussed at present, except that in those days the children did not dress as they do now. We did not realize it at the time, and neither did our well-meaning parents or they would have done otherwise, but the snap shot taken of us at the birthday party or in the Sunday best goes to prove beyond a doubt that the youngsters of today are dressed in more attractive togs than we were.

Not only are they more attractive, but they are more practical and far more comfortable. For the youngster under five the business in life is play. Ask any kiddie of that age you meet how she has put in her day, and if she can talk at all she will tell you with a lisp, or a jargon of her own choosing, that she has "been playin'." If she has not reached an age where she can coherently express herself in words, she will probably wiggle a toe at you and continue to chew her fingers, which when translated, means practically the same thing.

The designers of our day did not seem to get this point or at least they disregarded it when they saw fit to make up the fashions for that day and age. However, we are not going to discuss the fashions of a bygone day but rather, those of the ever peppy present.

For the baby there are the usual little dresses, made with kimono or not in sleeves, and the trimming of the little frock varies according to the taste and ambition of her mother. Some are stripped with lace, others are made of specially designed embroidery patterns with Philippine or Madeira work. Some combine the lace and the embroidery. For the everyday baby dress, however, the one in which most of the business of play is done, the more simple models are more favorable, they wear better and they wash better and they take infinitely less bother and time to make and to keep in order.

For trimming, they rely on a little feather stitching, a bit of smocking and a few French knots. Most of them are finished with a narrow edge of fine lace and they one and all button up the back.

The coats for the coming winter are made in the lighter shades preferably white and of such materials as velvet, euns, duveteens, and corduroys. They are trimmed with soft fur about the neck and hands, and most of them gain added warmth in deep cape collars.

With these are worn the bonnets either to match or in a contrasting color. For the most part they have been influenced by the times when grandmother was a girl and they poke up and out in wide soft flares that form a suggestion of haloes for the angel faces that they frame.

For the girls who is a bit older the dresses are much the same except that they are cut a length that will permit her to toddle off in her first steps, and as she goes on a year or two more she graduates into rompers, for a time which permit her perfect freedom in the playroom and the sand-pits.

These are made of the ginghams and chambrays and other attractive wash materials, trimmed simply with white wash braid or white piping and facings. In some instances they too are feather stitched and smocked and trimmed with buttons which also serve the purpose of keeping them on.

For these same misses there are fascinating party and dress-up frocks made of organdies and swisses in all the light and dainty shades. These are trimmed for the most part with ruffles of the same material as the dress, caught here and there with bunches of tiny French flowers.

For the girls who are attending school, the business in life becomes education, and for the school room many attractive tailored models have been designed. There are the one-piece dresses of serge and other durable woolen materials. These are trimmed with a bit of woolen embroidery by means of which a dash of color is added to attract the youthful fancy. These dresses hang straight from the shoulder and are caught to the figure with a belt made of the material embroidered or of a gay-colored leather or kid.

For the youngster who prefers the suit and waist combination there are numerous loose fitting straight hanging suits. The silhouette is straight, but the skirts are fuller and are made of dark materials and are usually laid in plaits. With these suits are two kinds of blouses. For the school room are the tailored models with the long roll collars, edged with a linterpress roll collar, edged with a little narrow fluted ruffle. They are made of dimity with the ruffles of some plain material.

For the more dressy occasion, very fluffy blouses have been designed to wear with the suit. These have the lace trimmed collars and cuffs and often are caught at the neck with the black Windsor tie.

The coats are made of heavy mixtures for everyday wear and cut ruttier than in the past seasons, and have from one to three capes as trimming. Many of them are fur trimmed which makes them more attractive and much warmer.

The school girl on more dressy occasions wears a straight hanging gown of velvet or velveteen trimmed with wool embroidery, or hand stitching. Very few wool jerseys are shown this year, and those few are in bright colors and suggest the sports suit.

And so the young Miss of today steps out of her business of playing or of being educated, appropriately garbed for the coming winter, in the most attractive and at the same time the most practical things the designer could choose.

Portland.—A resolution proposing the erection of a new steel bridge across the Willamette river to replace the one which now spans the river at Burnside street and cost approximately $8,000,000, has been proposed by the Multnomah county commissioners.

Peking.—Dissolution of the Chinese-Japanese military pact for combined war time defense of China's borders has been granted by Japan. China sought termination of the pact immediately upon the signing of the Versailles treaty.

Kansas City.—An increase of $1.50 a day to day and month laborers in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas coal mines has been allowed.

Vinenna.—European orthodox Jews have resolved to call a world congress, according to a dispatch from Pressburg, Czechoslovakia. This decision was taken at a conference of the "Agudath Israel," the most powerful organization of orthodox Jews in Europe.

Women's Fall Footwear Now on Display

Footwear of Fashion

It looks as if we were to have the French shoe and its variations with us for a long visit, for the stubby toed little foreigner has a host of fast friends, and has only waned a little in popularity after a very successful spring season. Yet milady's slender, aristocratic, long last is still a pace or two ahead.

For the average American woman, who strives to attain the height of good taste in dress, whose idea is to be smart, and yet conservative, the long vamped model, with perhaps a slightly rounded toe for walking and sport wear is the thing. This type of American woman in her most serious moments is endowed with many sensible ideas, and displays them in her dress. But she has her frivolous moments as well, and it is then that she flaunts her femininity.

For sports and daytime wear the oxford plays its unusual and leading part. These are found in fall models, in calfskin, cordovan or Russian calf and are shown with either the plain or wing tip. Casually interpreted, a special golfing oxford of especially pliable tan Russian calfskin, with strap trimmings and low heel.

Another very sensible shoe is the one having the Louis XV, or as it is called in various models, the "pump" heel, for afternoon wear in patent or dull leather with perhaps a stamper cut steel buckle to dress it up a bit. Then the wondrously long, slim sole or kid models for evening wear are satisfying.

Many of the slippers for women are wonderfully elaborate and gorgeous, while others are chosen for their simplicity. Exquisite for the dark colored evening gown are black satin slippers with vamps heavily beaded. Evening slippers in kid often have tiny straps across the instep, even in a most intricate fashion. These, sometimes, extend up over the sides and are enticingly feminine.

New York.—A "sugar bowl" riot broke out among the 1750 immigrants in the Ellis Island dining room when for the first time since the war, sugar was substituted for molasses on the tables. Several aliens were removed to hospitals, one with three fractured ribs. Some of the hundreds had not seen sugar since the first months of the war. They immediately began to delve with their fingers into the sweet stuff.

Ottawa, Ont.—Emphasizing the international relations between Canada and the United States, Sir James Aikins, president of the Canadian bar association, in opening the convention declared that "with Americans we, the representatives of the British empire, hold and will hold against all states in a most intricate fashion, the common civilization from the Rio Grande to the North Pole."

New York.—William Nelson Cromwell, administrator, has filed notice in the surrogate's court that he would contest an attempt by Mrs. Henrietta R. Hurlburt to set aside a will of the late Mrs. Frank Leslie, which left the bulk of her valuable estate to Miss Carrie Chapman Catt for the cause of woman suffrage.

The Fall Blouse

Is Lovelier Than Ever Before—

Modern blouses have advanced so far from the old time "waistee" that they hardly seem related to them. However, they show the connection plainly, for although they are artistic and chic to a marked degree, they have not lost any of the real practical worth of former times. Our blouses of georgette and crepe de chine are well made, amply cut and beautifully finished.

They are Priced from $5.95 to $25

Tailored and Semi-Tailored Blouses $4.95 to $15.00

Nothing can take the place of these blouses and when worn for street wear with slender fitting suits, one is assured of being in perfect taste. You will find a wide assortment of these blouses at our store.
