Judges Can Kiss Their Stenographers

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 8.—Shades of Blackstone! And Home!
 The Oklahoma state supreme court has decided it is quite legal for jurists to kiss their stenographers. This decision was handed down in the outer proceedings brought against Judge R. E. Davenport, of Chickasha, in the Grady county circuit court, on charges of moral turpitude. The "moral turpitude" was a grand jury's indictment term for the judge's act in kissing his stenographer.
 A district court found that the grand jury had no jurisdiction in the case and dismissed the indictment, its verdict being upheld by the supreme court. The judge can now go on kissing his stenographer without fear of legal entanglements from the grand jury.

Salem, Eugene, Bearcats Play Puget Sound Next Saturday

Is there any sensible reason why the Eugene and Salem high school football teams should play at Eugene on November 20th before a few rows of bare bleachers when, if the match is played at Corvallis, it will be witnessed by a large crowd?
 Believing that question is a poser, local officials are negotiating with the purple and white squad with a view to convincing the Eugeneans that the Corvallis plan is the best. The clash is staged as a preliminary to the Oregon-O. A. C. fracas, the high school game will be witnessed by thousands, it is pointed out, and will be far more remunerative.
 Local officials are confident that the Eugene manager will see the offer in the right light. Everybody who has been in Eugene when the Oregon team is playing a big game at Corvallis knows that there are about enough people left in the town to stage a couple of games of solitaire. If the game is played at Corvallis, excursions can be run from both schools at a small cost, and those viewing the intercollegiate game will also be permitted to see the state classic.
 "It is simply a good business proposition," Principal Nelson, of the local school, said today. "We can go to Corvallis and split the gate receipts 50-50. Each school will be well off in a financial way, while at Eugene neither of us would realize much."

Bearcats Play Puget Sound Next Saturday

Although a few bruises were the only remaining evidences of the game with Pacific Saturday, Coach Mathews allowed the men who played most of the game to rest Monday before beginning the week of practice before the game with College of Puget Sound, which will be played Saturday in the Tacoma stadium.
 Evidences are that Rarey and Ramsay, the only remaining cripples on the squad, will be in shape by the end of the week. So the Bearcats will line up at full strength against Willamette's star institution in the north.
 Tacoma is a rapid football town but gets few college games, so the Bearcats should draw a 5-g gate in the Sound city. Last year they defeated Puget Sound 10-0 in Salem. The Tacoma squad is not much changed since that time. Newell Stone, a former Willamette man and center on the freshman basket ball team, is playing tackle for Puget Sound. In health has lost the northwestern services of Eddie Danielson, their star halfback, but the rest of the backfield is intact.

Arsenate "Kick" Added by Still, Officers Assert

"It would certainly be unwise for anyone to tackle booze made from the outfit," is Sheriff Needham's observation concerning the still captured at Mt. Angel, Saturday.
 A set of copper coils provided with iron and lead fittings constitute the "trouble section" of the illicit apparatus. Officers assert that arsenate of lead, a poison, is added to the moonshine when this combination of metals is used in distilling. Poisoned drinks resulting from this chemical reaction have caused many deaths.
 The still is the one taken from Joe Calister, 70, a resident of Mt. Angel. A federal revenue officer from Portland assisted by Sheriff Needham and Deputy Sheriff Smith made the raid. Only a small quantity of liquor was found, Falister claiming that he had "only made a little" for his own use.
 The Mt. Angel man will appear in United States district court at Portland Wednesday.

Editor Suing Prosecutor For Big Damages

St. Helena, Or., Nov. 9.—Ham Kautzman, formerly publisher of the Columbia Herald, and now publisher of the Tualatin Valley News, has filed a damage suit against Glen R. Metsker, district attorney of Columbia county and E. C. Stanwood, formerly sheriff of the county. Kautzman asked for $20,000, and in his complaint charged that he was wrongfully prosecuted in an attempt to force him to leave St. Helena and cease the publication of the Herald.
 The suit is the aftermath of a controversy between Metsker and Kautzman. Kautzman was indicted on 21 different counts for publishing articles in his paper. He was found guilty on two counts and sentenced to six months in jail and fined $500.

Poison Sold for Whiskey, Charge

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 8.—A campaign has been started to wipe out soft drink establishments in the vicinity of the United States hospital here, where, it is charged, poisonous concoctions are being sold convalescent war veterans under the guise of whiskey. A number of the 532 veterans at the hospital have been ill. It is charged by major L. P. H. Bahrenbrug, the commandant, from drinking the concoctions.
 The first arrest in the campaign was that of John Wetzel, charged with selling a concoction of sweet spirits of nitre, alcohol and other undrinkable ingredients to a prohibition officer who entered the place accompanied by a soldier. Wetzel denied selling drinks to soldiers. He was held for violation of the prohibition laws.
