Hogs are 5 cents; sausage 40 cents. Apparently there is money in raising dogs.

It is indeed a new era that applies the word "bank" to a doughboy who says "you-all."

To estimate a man's income, discover the amount on which he pays tax and multiply by four.

Still, if everybody should go back to the farm, who would make automobiles for the farmer?

It seems like old times to see the dear creature go shopping without taking any money along.

At times one suspects that it is much easier to please God than it is to please the reformers.

The manufacturers' prices are coming down round by round. And every little round means fire and fire.

The most popular relief measure for farmers would be a law limiting the retail price of gasoline.

In this land of opportunity the poorest man can go out and hold up a pedestrian and get a start in life.

It is probably unnecessary to explain that Liberty bonds have nothing in common with matrimonial bonds.

The old-fashioned hotel clerk used the word "sir" in every sentence. But the rooms were not all full then.

The concited man has his little faults, but you never hear him whining that success is simply a matter of luck.

By the time an immigrant learns to whistle the latest Broadway hits, he begins to speak of the newcomers as aliens.

It doesn't take a wife very long to learn that she can handle her husband more easily by bringing about him a little.

Speaking of complications, it is doubtful if rouge can ever equal the results obtained by consistent use of elbow grease.

A stranger from Mars could easily pick out the civilized nations. They are the only ones who know how to make poison gas.

Perhaps it is safest to speed. All of the wrecks have happened to people who were not driving faster than fifteen miles an hour.

The Spoiler.
With a twinkle in his eye He'd come early to bed by An' he'd whistle to the children An' he'd chuckle 'em to come, Then he'd chuckle low an' say "Come along, I'm on my way, An' it's I that need your company To buy a little gum."

When his merry call they'd hear, All the children far an' near, Would come fixin' from the gardens.

Like the chickens after wheat, When we'd shake our heads an' say:

"No, you hadn't got today!" He'd beg to let him have 'em in a pack about his feet.

Oh, he spoiled 'em, one an' all, There was not a youngster small But was overfed on candy An' was stuffed with lollypops, An' I think his greatest joy Was to get some girl or boy An' bring 'em to their parents An' beamed by chocolate drops.

Now the children's hearts are sore For he comes to them no more, And no more to them he whistles And no more for them he stops; But in Paradise, I think, With his chuckle and his wink He is leading little angels To the heavenly candy shops.

Farm Wage Scale Highest in 1920

Washington, Jan. 28. — Wage rates for farm reached their highest point in the history of this country in 1920, according to figures gathered by the department of agriculture and made public today. The average wage rate for labor hired for the month, it was shown, was $4.88 with board, and $4.38 without board; for day labor at harvest $2.65 with board and $2.25 without board. For a day laborer other than at harvest, the scale averaged $2.86 with board and $2.48 without board.

Sectional Reapportionment
Unable to secure additional representation at the expense of western Oregon from the regular committees, Multnomah and eastern Oregon delegations have forced the appointment of a hand-picked special committee on reapportionment, which is controlled by the two sections. In this committee, western Oregon is a hopeless minority.

It is planned to take away from western Oregon 4 or 5 representatives, giving half to Portland and half to eastern Oregon, or to juggle the apportionment so that each of the two sections controlling the legislative machine profit at the expense of the rest of the state.

The reapportionment committee consists of Senator Dennis of Union and Wallowa, Senator Robertson of Sherman, Gilliam and Wheeler, Senator Staples of Multnomah, Senator Patterson of Benton and Polk, Senator Hall of Coos and Curry, Representative Burdick of Deschutes, Jefferson, Crook, Klamath and Lake; Representative Carter of Jackson, Representative Gordon of Multnomah, Representative Hurd of Clatsop and Representative Gallagher of Malheur and Harney.

Marion, Clackamas, Linn and Lane, the great Willamette valley counties, are without representation on the committee which has led to the fear that the other sections will profit at the expense of this region, and the actions of the respective factions justifies the supposition.

The population of eastern Oregon (1920 census which dominates the committee is 152,187. The population of Multnomah 275,898, and the population of the rest of the state 355,200. The additional representation for eastern Oregon at the expense of the rest of the state, is not justified by the population or its increase. Five eastern Oregon counties lost population in the past ten years, and the total increase in population for this period in eastern Oregon was 15,007, as against 49,637 for Multnomah, and 45,876 for the rest of the state.

Why should eastern Oregon, with the smaller proportional gain in population, a gain only one-third that of western Oregon, profit at the latter's expense? Why should the redistricting be done at the expense of the richest and most populous section of Oregon to the advantage of the least populous and poorest?

The eastern Oregon and Multnomah delegations act as units on all matters affecting the welfare of their sections, while the Willamette delegations are hopelessly divided. That is why eastern Oregon and Multnomah are enabled to bargain their desires into laws at the expense of western Oregon and until western Oregon shows a similar capacity to unite, it will continue loser in legislative logrolling.

The growth of sectionalism is to be deplored and eventually will react against those practicing it. Probably however the present sectionalism is the natural reaction of the sectionalism practiced in the past by the Willamette valley in its own interests.

"Missing Heir" Martin Refuses Forty Million

The forty million dollar Jennings estate now held in the chancery court of London awaits Charles Loring Martin, former Salem resident, if he chooses to go after it, according to a letter received from Martin by Harry M. Styles, 130 South Liberty street.

But Charles doesn't want that much money. No! He would much rather earn two dollars an hour and do eight hours work, than have his breakfast in bed, served by an English cookery.

Charles says poor people are happier any way, for the rich are always being annoyed by legal and poor relations and people just always want to get some of your money.

And Charles can't stand to be annoyed. He's an artist in Chicago now, painting the glorious western scenes for the appreciative people of the polo grounds. So his surroundings must be harmonious.

Riches could not add any more happiness to Charles' life at present, for he has been recently married and his wife is interested in a new and more relation and they get across from Salem people. And they average daily sales of this mail order business is $500. So despite Charles' refusal to proclaim himself the missing heir to the English estate he is doing quite well.

Wilson Shows Improvement In Health Says Cox

Washington, Jan. 27.—There has been a "very marked change" for the better in President Wilson's condition since last summer, former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, declared today after a forty-minute visit to the president at the White House. The executive, Mr. Cox said, was "heavier and more robust in every way" than he was on the occasion of the former governor's call last summer soon after he had been nominated as the democratic presidential candidate.

Describing his visit as merely a "friendly" call, Mr. Cox refused to go into details as to his conversation. He did say that his projected trip to Europe in June was talked about and added that he would not take any messages to Europe for the president.

Mr. Cox emphatically disclaimed any purpose in his call to talk politics and jokingly remarked that he had gone to the White House to tell the president that he had decided "not to mix in."

Mine to Eliminate Pen's Big Coal Bill

Moundsville, W. Va., Jan. 27.—An $5,000 mine now nearing completion on the state's property just east of this city will eliminate a coal bill in excess of $10,000 annually and eventually all material in planning the big West Virginia State penitentiary on an entirely self-supporting basis.

Announcement of this effort was made by Warden J. Z. Terrell, who is carrying out a number of other money-saving plans, including a strict program of conservation.

The new coal mine, which will be shut-operated, is no weight feat in a vein of fine coal which underlies the 145 acres of the prison farm. As soon as motors are installed, probably within the next thirty days, the mine will be operating. Little or no expense will be attached to the state in working the mine, as prisoners will do the work and the power for operating will be supplied from the huge dynamo within the walls of the prison.

The Restless Sex

By Robert Chamb, a Author of "Barbarians," "The Dark Star," etc. (Copyrighted 1918 by Robert W. Chambers)

"Good-bye!" she said. He caught her at the door, and she turned and looked up gravely.

"Don't spoil it!" she whispered, disengaging herself.

So he released her, and she stretched out her hand, smiled at him, and stepped out. The music-phone continued to play gaily.

A girl who was coming upstairs saw her as she left Cleland's studio and, as the pretty visitor sped lightly past her, the girl who was mounting turned and watched her. Then she resumed her ascent, came slowly to Cleland's open door and stood there resting a moment as though out of breath.

Cleland, reclining the rug, glanced up and caught sight of Stephanie; and the quick blood burst his face.

She came in as though still a trifle weary from the ascent. Neither spoke. She glanced down at the two empty wine glasses on his desk, saw the decanter, the biscuits and cigarettes. The music phone was playing rhapsodically.

"Who is that girl?" she asked in an even, colorless voice.

"A girl I met."

"No, you mind telling me her name?"

"I—don't know it," he said, getting colder.

"Oh, shall I enlighten you?"

"Thank you."

"She's Macy Chiff, of the Polites Eye seen her dancer."

"Really," he said carelessly.

Stephanie leaned against the desk, resting one hand on it. An odd sense of mental fatigue possessed her; things were not clear in her mind; she was not very sure of what she was saying.

"I came up to say—that I'm sorry you were quarrelled. . . . I'm going in a moment. . . . You're already had tea, I see. So you won't care for any more."

After a flushed silence, he said: "Did you have a successful lesson, Steve?"

"I've had two—lessons. Yes, they were quite—successful."

"You seem tired."

"No." She turned and walked to the door. He opened it for her in silence.

"Good night," she said.

"Good night."

Chapter XXIII
Cleland's unhappy interpretation of the episode was masculine and therefore erroneous—the interpretation of a very young man whose reverence for the restless sex might require revision some day or other unless he died exceedingly young. For he concluded now that he had thoroughly disgusted Stephanie Quest; first by his vulgar flirtation with Lady Burton-eye, then by losing his temper and admitting to her his own odious materialism; and, furthermore and flagrantly, by his tasteless behavior with a pretty girl whose name even he had not known when she entertained her at his impromptu tea-dinner.

He was himself quite ruined in the unemotional grey eyes of a girl who, herself, was so colorless aloof from the ignoble emotions turking over and fervently in the masculine animal.

He had had little enough chance with Stephanie, even when his conduct had been exemplary. Now he was dreadfully certain that his chances were less than none at all, that he had done himself in. What had he to hope of her now?

To this unconventional girl had been presented a beautiful girl had been offered the very best spectacle of the town had temper and so respectable behaviour. And she—

SLEEPY-TIME TALES THE TALE OF FATTY COON
BY ARTHUR, SCOTT BAILEY

Fatty Coon Goes Fishing
One day Fatty Coon was strolling along the brook which flowed not far from his home. He stopped now and then, to chough close to the water's edge, in the hope of catching a fish. And one time when he lay quite still among the rocks at the side of a deep pool, with his eyes searching the clear water, Fatty Coon suddenly saw something bright, all yellow and red, that glighted on the water.

He was surprised, for he never knew a lot of a fly to be so strong as that. Something pricked at his cheek and Fatty thought that the bright thing had stung him. He tried to take it out of his mouth, and he was surprised again. Whatever the thing seemed to be stuck fast in his mouth. And so the time Fatty

Dallas

Dallas, Or., Jan. 28.—A small change bill is being considered in connection with the Willamette Valley Lumber company. The building will be ready for operation about the middle of February and will employ a number of men.

The Dallas bakery has entered into an agreement with the rest of the bakers throughout the state and is turning out a palatable prime bread. Local housewives are urged to try the prize bread, turned out by the local bakery. They will find it excellent.

The Rex Cafe has ordered its furniture from the Ford company. The cafe is located in the Elbow building and is the finest eating place in the city. The walls have been redecorated and new tables and counters have been put in. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Baker are conducting the restaurant.

B. M. Shattuck, of the Shattuck Motor company, received official notification from the Ford Motor company that the Fordson has dropped in price from $899.75 to $725.35, a reduction of 19%. The quality of the machines remains the same but Ford is co-operating with the farmers, knowing that the soil will have to be made productive regardless of the times and conditions.

P. B. Ferguson, sheriff, and Miss Nison, deputy sheriff of McMinnville, Yamhill county, were in Dallas recently to look over the book-keeping system of Polk county. They were looking over the tax rolls and other matters pertaining to the sheriff's office. Mr. Ferguson formerly lived in Dallas and his father ran a livery stable.

Miss Roberta Scheubel, representative of the West Coast Chaulanqua company, is in Dallas today trying to make arrangements for the booking of a lyceum course for next winter. Miss Scheubel was formerly a student at the state university and a member of the Alpha Phi sorority.

There has been very little buying of real estate during the past month, but last week interest was again shown by people wishing to buy property and take advantage of the opportunities offered. Scores of Co-Eds Earn Own Money

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 27.—Having all the necessary money is no longer necessary for the girl who would go to college. Such parental jobs as tending farmwork may still be for men only, but many girls now wait on table, do part-time clerical work for the college office, and in many other ways are succeeding in earning all or nearly all of their college expenses.

Of the 152 girls at Wellesley college, approximately one-fifth are earning either all or a part of their way through. Sixty girls are held from endowed scholarships.

Banish Catarrh

Breathe Hyomel for Two Minutes and Stuffed Up Head Will Go.

If you want to get rid of catarrh, cold in the head or from an irritating cough in the shortest time, breathe Hyomel.

It will clean out your head in two minutes and allow you to breathe freely, awake or asleep, or money refunded.

Hyomel should end a cold in one day, and relieve you of disgusting sniffles, hawking, spitting and offensive breath in a week.

Hyomel is made chiefly from eucalyptus, a soothing, healing, germ-killing antiseptic, that comes from the eucalyptus forests of inland Australia, where catarrh, asthma and other bronchial troubles are seldom known.

Hyomel is pleasant and easy to breathe. Just pour a few drops into the hard rubber inhaler, use as directed and relief is almost certain.

A complete Hyomel outfit, including inhaler and one bottle of Hyomel, costs but little at D. J. Fry's and druggists everywhere.

And when Fatty reached out and grabbed the make-believe fly Farmer Green was even more surprised at what happened than Fatty himself. If the fish-hook hadn't worked loose from Fatty's mouth Farmer Green would have caught the queerest fish anybody ever caught, almost.

Something seemed to happen. Farmer Green, as he was laughing loud and long, Fatty Coon didn't laugh. His mouth was too sore; he was too frightened. But he was glad that the strange fly had flown away.

At least that was what Fatty Coon thought.

He was being dragged along through the water. He began to be frightened. And for the first time he noticed that there was a slender line which stretched from his mouth straight across the pool. As he looked along the line Fatty saw a man at the other end of it—a man, standing on the other side of the brook! And he was pulling Fatty toward him as fast as he could.

Do you wonder that Fatty Coon was frightened? He jumped back—as well as he could in the water—and tried to swim away. His mouth hurt; but he plunged and pulled just the same, and jerked his head and squirmed and wriggled and twisted. And just as Fatty had almost given up hope of getting free, the gay-colored leg, or fly, or whatever it was, flew out of his mouth and took the line with it. At least that was what Fatty Coon thought. And he swam quickly to the bank and scrambled into the bushes.

Now this was what really happened. Farmer Green had come up the brook to catch trout. On the end of his fish-line he had tied a make-believe fly, with a hook hidden under his head and yellow wings. He had stolen along the brook very quietly, so that he wouldn't frighten the fish. And he had made so little noise that Farmer Green had not seen Fatty, crouched as he was among the
