Willamette Will Defend Name of West

Seldom has interest in a debate contest attained such proportions as is manifest concerning the debate this evening between Willamette university and Morning-side college, of Sioux City, Iowa, which will be held in the chaopel auditorium of Waller hall.
The forensic event is epochal as it marks the first intersectional debate ever to be staged by Willamette university, and the second to be staged in the west this season, the first being scheduled by the University of Oregon when they entertained the debate team from Princeton university last winter.
Bernard Ransay, Frank Bennett and Sheldon Sackett, the Willamette debaters, have been engaged in perfecting their arguments during the past two weeks. Every member of the Willamette team is a polished speaker, each having represented the university in forensic contests during the past few years, and have returned home with the "lion's share of the bacon."
Elmo S. White, a prominent attorney of Salem, will be the chairman this evening when the teams meet to discuss, "Resolved, that immigration to the United States should be further restricted by additional literacy tests." The judges of the debate are: A. A. Knowlton, of Reed college of Portland; Prof. James H. Gilbert, of the University of Oregon; Prof. U. G. Dubach, of O. A. C.
Musical numbers will be contributed to the evening's program by Evelyn DeLong, Lorelei Blatchford and Marguerite Cook.

Twelve New Recruits Enlist In M Company

Twelve recruits have been enlisted in M company of the Oregon national guard within the last ten days bringing the total up to 80 men, according to Sergeant Robbins who was handling the enlistment of the men at the armory Monday night. Within the next two weeks, Captain Leroy Hewitt expects to bring his total strength up to 100.
A tentative rifle range has been obtained four miles from Salem in Polk county and preparations are being made to permit the men to practice at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards, both rapid and slow firing. The company has already had instruction in aiming and sighting, but new recruits will be taken over the same course of instruction before they are allowed to do work on the range.
The tentative date for encampment this year has been changed from July to June 16 to 30 inclusive. This will give a large number of the members in the Fifth regiment who are now in schools and colleges a chance to go to Camp Lewis.
Following quarterly muster and inspection last night, the company was given instruction in the use of the light Browning automatic rifle. This is the first time the organization has had an opportunity to learn anything concerning this remarkable weapon, which is fastest shooting gun of its kind in the world.
The twelve recruits of the company are:
Asel C. Eoff, Archie J. Elliott, Maxwell M. Jones, Roy W. Remington, Wilbur F. Dally, Roland B. Reinhardt, Alanson R. Mason, Ernest W. Schwabauer, William M. Peterson, Walter L. Wiggins, Harold B. Millard, Cecil R. Frame
Winslow, Man.—The Scottish team of professional football players which will tour the United States and Canada during the early summer, will sail from Liverpool, May 11, arriving at New York about May 17, according to word received today by Dan MacNeil, president of the Dominion Football association.
London.—Thousands gathered along the banks of the Thames from Putney to Mortlake this morning to gain position from which they might witness the annual Oxford-Cambridge boat race, which will be rowed at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

To Stabilize the Berry Industry

Organization of a $10,000,000 corporation to handle the canning and marketing of the berry crops of Oregon and Washington by completing a merger of the various canneries, comes as good news to the growers and operators of both states. The new project will be financed by bankers of both states and has for its object the placing of the industry upon a firm foundation.
It is the announced plans of the corporation to take over the preserving and canning plants that are found efficient and construct new ones where necessary, and market products under Washington and Oregon labels. Enlarged markets will be sought by an extensive advertising campaign.
The rapid growth of the berry industry in the Northwest and the chaotic conditions existing as a result of the undercapitalization of plants, the recent inflation in prices and sugar followed by the collapse of markets due to the slump, make this the psychological time for the formation of a strong company to reorganize the industry upon a business basis with adequate capitalization for operation.
Huge profits were made in the past few years by the processors, but these profits were spent along with new capital in enlarged plants. The business depression found costly stocks on hand that had to be sold at a heavy loss on a falling market—or kept on hand to deteriorate without a market. Only the strongest of concerns could absorb the loss and continue in business.
The advantages of the merger are many. It will permit a cooperation that will eliminate waste, curtail costly competition, eliminate duplication of overhead and permit the development of efficient marketing machinery. Upon its success depends the future of the berry industry in the Northwest and the stabilizing of the industry.

Reviving the Whipping Post

Delaware has revived the whipping post as punishment for crime and unless sentimentalists again interfere to prevent the "barbarous" punishment, another opportunity will be offered to demonstrate its efficacy as a crime deterrent. Certainly orthodox punishments are not.
In a recent statement regarding the increase of crime, William A. Pinkerton, the detective says: "There is only one way to curb crime and that is to re-establish the whipping-post and the rod, as a criminal fears twenty lashes more than twenty years. They have frequently told me so."
A decade or so ago the whipping post was revived in Oregon but there are so many mushy people in this state who want the criminal to lie on a bed of roses that it was repealed before it had a fair chance to prove its value—nevertheless it reformed some of our wife-beaters.
Those who protest the brutality of the whipping post forget the brutality that hold up men use on their victims. They forget the average low mentality among criminals, many of whose mental development is sufficient to dread and fear a flogging but not sufficient to comprehend the punishment of imprisonment, any more than a child does. It is not enough that the punishment fit the crime—it should fit the criminal. Until there is promptness, fitness and efficiency in punishment of crime, the crime waves will continue to increase.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES THE TALE OF TOMMY FOX BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

Tommy Fox makes a strange friend.
There was one thing, especially, that surprised Tommy Fox. And I think it surprised the dog Spot even more. Tommy and Spot became friends.
At first, whenever Spot came near Tommy would run into his hole, as far as his chain would allow him. But after a time he began to peep out at his visitor. And finally he grew so bold that when Spot came to see him he stayed above ground, though to be sure he sat close to the door of his house, so that he could whisk out of sight if Spot should come too near him.
Since Spot often came to look at Johnnie Green's new pet, he began to like Tommy. And instead of growling, he would wag his tail, and try to be friendly. And first they knew, they were playing together, and rolling and tumbling about, pretending to bite each other.
Now, Spot was much bigger than Tommy Fox, and stronger. And sometimes when they played together he would get so rough that Tommy would run down into his underground house and hide. But he never lost his temper, because he knew that Spot did not mean to hurt him. And Tommy was always ready to come out again and play some more.
Johnnie Green was very proud of his new pet. And one day when he was going to drive to the village he took Tommy Fox with him. He tied Tommy's chain to the wagon and Tommy sat up on the seat beside his young master. He had a fine ride. It frightened him at first, to see so many people, for it was market-day, when the farmers for miles around came to the village to sell their butter and eggs and vegetables. There was a great number of dogs, too, running about the village streets. Tommy was glad that he was high up on the seat of the wagon, beside Johnnie Green, for he knew that he was perfectly safe there. He saw so many strange sights that after that first day whenever he saw Johnnie starting off for the village he was never satisfied unless he went too.
On the whole, Tommy Fox did not have a bad time, being Johnnie Green's pet. And although Farmer Green often complained that Johnnie would rather play with his young fox than drive the cows, or feed the chickens, or fetch water from the pump, still Farmer Green himself rather enjoyed watching Tommy Fox.
But at last something happened that made Farmer Green very angry. One morning he discovered that a fine hen had disappeared during the night. And the following night another hen vanished.
Farmer Green was puzzled. Old Spot had been loose all the time, and he had never barked once,

A Woman Who Wouldn't Remarry

By Idah McGlone Gibson
The Noted Writer

Alicia's Mother.
I was almost sure that there were tears in my mother's eyes before she raised her head, when I exclaimed: "Why, mother, what are you doing up here?"
She looked up, startled, and then I found I must have been mistaken, for, although my mother's eyes were very bright and there seemed to be a drawn look about them that I had never seen before, there were no tears in them.
"I was just looking, my dear child, for your great-grandmother's garter. Your grandmother wore it and I wore it, for you know the old superstition: 'Something old and something new, something borrowed and something blue.' Then she picked up from her lap and held out to me a long piece of narrow, knitted, blue silk.
"Surely that is not my great-grandmother's garter," I said inquiringly.
"Yes, my dear, that was the garter that your great-grandmother wore. It was before the time of rubber, you know. And, Alicia, I am going to lend you this little gold buckle to thread the knot of the garter through," and mother pulled out from the toe of the little baby shoe an exquisite gold buckle set with diamonds.
"Why didn't you keep this beautiful thing in your jewel case, mother?" I asked in astonishment.
"Because I never wore it, dear, except on my wedding day and after you were born I felt that here was a jewel case more appropriate for it. And so I put it in your first little shoe and hid it up here in this trunk, which is filled with memories."

My arms went around my mother's neck; my kisses softly closed her eyelids down over the tears just at their edge. My mother was just another girl. She, too, had had the thoughts that had been mine today. I felt so grieved for her, and yet—and yet I wondered how I really had anything for which to grieve.
"Oh, mother," I called, "I don't want to change. I don't want to love Hal less. I want it to be always as it is now. I don't want to be like you and Dad; like Uncle Tom and Aunt Betty. I want to be young. I want to stay young. I want to keep longing for Hal's arms about me and I want to feel that when they are there that my whole world is within them. If I thought that Hal was going to change and that my heart, too, might become cold and numb as I grew older I should want to die this morning when everything is at its brightest."
My mother's face was saddened, and she drew a long sigh as she said, "I know, Alicia. The bliss of romantic love comes to a woman but once, and for a time it makes gods and goddesses of those who experience it. But the rarified atmosphere which is necessary to its life is something which we mortals cannot endure for long."
"I have been thinking, as I sat here this morning with your little baby shoes in my hand, that I had not been a good mother to you, Alicia. But I have let you build up your dreams and your illusions because I knew that they were the sweetest things that can come into a woman's life. I am inclined to think now that I should have made you understand, dear child, that marriage from the very first is a very different thing from this wonderful existence to which you are looking forward."
"The overpowering, all-embracing emotion of love that you feel now for the man you are going to marry is but one of the delightful experiences of life. Marriage is the greatest part of life, in which love is only an incident. Love, my child, even a great love, may be for a week, a month or a year, but marriage is for every day. Marriage is the universal business of woman and man. It is obeying, in the best sense, nature's great behest, and nature, my dear

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How To Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance.
"Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a capital and mental weakness, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly ruins the vitality of the system, and the strength of which will be so necessary to success and power in every walk of life," says Dr. J. C. Chamberlain, of the New York Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, "and who has cured a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the need of iron in my practice, and I have seen thousands of patients who have been cured of their weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food never passes through the body anything like the course through an old mill with rollers so close that the mill can't grind."
"For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable, and all run down," while at 40 you are weak, plenty of iron in your blood, you may be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy."
But be sure the iron you take is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not metallic iron which people usually take. Organic iron—Nuxated Iron—is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron filings and is therefore an entirely different form from Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly concentrated form that one dose is equivalent to approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen baked apples. It is like taking extracts of beef instead of eating pounds of beef.
Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It quickly helps make rich red blood, revitalizes worn-out exhausted nerves and gives increased strength and energy. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturer if it does not produce satisfactory results. For sale by all druggists.
