What Makes a Good Pavement?

You are vitally interested in the discussion which is now going on regarding street improvements in this community. The money to be expended for this purpose is your money. You want to get your money's worth. Therefore, you are vitally interested in the qualifications of a good pavement.

A good pavement must, in the first place, have durability so that it will be able to withstand the impact of heavy traffic throughout a long period of time, without deterioration.

A good pavement must be reasonable in initial cost so that the burden on the taxpayers will be kept to a minimum.

A good pavement must have a negligible amount of upkeep or maintenance cost, so that public inconvenience and expense caused by repairs will not be present.

The asphaltic concrete type of pavement—base and surface—combines all the characteristics spoken of above. This pavement can be used within 24 hours after it is laid. Its adoption will assure satisfactory pavement in your community.

Indian Admitted As Citizen First Time In Nation's History

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 17.—Lo, the red man has at last been given the full rights of citizenship by his pale-faced Uncle Sam.

Thomas Blackbird, twenty-three years old, is the first full-blooded Indian ever admitted to citizenship in the United States. He was given complete naturalization by Judge Riner, in the Federal district court here.

Blackbird, a full blooded Sioux Indian, and a veteran of the World War. He was admitted under a special act of congress, passed November 5, 1919, the provisions of which permit an Indian of legal age who has served in the World War to become a citizen without first making any formal declaration. Henceforth, the Indian may vote, hold office or exercise any other privilege enjoyed by the electorate.

Loyal service to the government during the hostilities with the Central powers removed the ban against Indians becoming citizens, despite the fact that they were born in this country, and Blackbird is the first real "native" to take advantage of the privilege bestowed upon the red man.

Blackbird served nearly two years in France, being in several of the American army's major operations. He is now in the regular army stationed at Fort D. A. Russell, near here.
