

Cannery In Need Of Funds

Albany House Can Not Run Unless Money Is Forthcoming For Stock

Albany, June 2.—The drive for funds to insure the opening and operation of the Albany cannery this season has been resumed by committees made up of Albany men who are trying to put the community over the top for the quota of $50,000 stock in the Oregon-Washington Canning and Preserving company.

The committee met with the Albany chamber of commerce at a noon luncheon recently to discuss the matter. Canvassing among Albany business men was in progress during the day.

In discussing the situation with L. Finch, who is here as fiscal agent of the cannery company, said that about 100 people of this community hold stock in the Puyallup and Sumner Fruit Growers Canning company and they are to be given eight per cent stock in the new company in exchange for the seven per cent stock of the old company.

Mr. Finch states that the Albany cannery represents an investment of $125,000 and that the property will be forced to be idle this year if growers of the community and Albany men do not subscribe for enough stock to finance the operating expense of the cannery here this year.

Demand for Workers Is Very Slight

Berry Picking Is To Absorb Surplus of Labor In Salem, Is Belief of Race

There is at present no apparent demand for berry pickers in or near Salem. There is also a small surplus of labor in this city, according to Police Judge Earl Race who conducts a free employment bureau at his offices in the city hall.

"I expected a few requests for pickers by this time," Judge Race said this morning, "but so far there hasn't been an application filed with me."

Belief that berry picking activities will absorb the small surplus of labor in the city, was expressed by Judge Race. The few men whom he has been unable to furnish with work of some kind have been chiefly transients.

The strawberry crop is to be good, growers believe, and the gooseberry yield will be fair. In consequence it is believed that scores of men and women will be given employment as pickers.

All through the winter Judge Race has been procuring jobs for men in search of employment and few, he says, who have been persistent, have failed to get work. Many of the jobs are, however, for short periods only.

Pendleton, June 2.—A proposal to advertise Umatilla county so that tourists coming through here will have an opportunity to appreciate some of the outstanding features of the life and interests of the county has been put forward by Judge L. M. Schranep of the county court.

Judge Schranep's idea, as he has explained it to friends, is to erect at least four monster sign boards on the main traveled highways near the county line on all four boundaries.

One would be placed between Umatilla and Boardman, another on the Oregon Trail between Union and Umatilla counties, a third to the north on the Oregon-Washington line and a fourth on the highway between Pilot and Heppner on the Oregon-Washington highway.
