Studebakers Film Will Be Here Tonight

What is declared to be one of the most remarkable industrial films ever taken will be exhibited here tonight at 8 o'clock at the Commercial club auditorium. It shows the complete manufacture of the Studebaker light six automobile in what is said to be the swiftest and one of the most modern plants in the world. Arrangements to show the motion picture were made by the Marion Automobile company, distributors of the Studebaker machine.

Although of an industrial nature, the movie abounds in human interest, with plenty of action and in some cases real excitement. It shows the making of Studebaker cars from the raw material down to the finished car.

One of the unusual features of the film is that special lighting and coloring effects were used in many of the scenes, making them realistic to a striking degree. Veritable miracles are performed by automatic and other ultra-modern devices that do nearly everything but talk.

A view of this movie is in some ways more interesting and inspiring than a trip through an automobile plant itself, because many details and operations which escape the eye on such a journey are caught by the camera. An educational advantage of this film is that it shows the manufacture and assembly of each individual unit in continuity. For instance, in the making of the crankshaft, each step is pictured from the forging operation down to the complete machining of this important unit. The same applies to the camshaft, motor, body and other parts.

The numerous inspections thru which each part passes to insure its accuracy and quality are vividly pictured, and thruout the picture an impressive feature is the speed and efficiency with which results are secured, as well as the high type of men to whom the various tasks are allotted. All operations shown are performed in the Studebaker plant at South Bend, where the new light six is manufactured complete.

University Student Passes Intelligence Test; Score Perfect

Seattle, Wash., June 4—Michael Nolan, 42 year old University of Washington engineering student, today was characterized by university authorities as "one of the twenty five most brilliant minds in the United States" following his feat in making a perfect score—212 points—in the army "alpha" intelligence test.

Nolan required only 13 of the 17 minutes allowed, in which to complete the test. His feat was unequalled, so far as is known here, by any of the approximately 3,000,000 service men who took the test during the war.

According to Dr. E. R. Guthrie, professor of psychology at the university, the best previous record of 207 points in 17 minutes was made by a Yale university professor while an officer in the army. The highest score known to have been made by any university student was 206. The average for the army was 135.

Nolan's education prior to his entering the university last year, was confined to seven grades in an Irish Grammar school. He had been a lumberjack, longshoreman and roving jack of all trades. Within four weeks after entering a Canadian base hospital to which he was invalided during the war, he qualified as an expert bacteriologist—work in which he had no previous training—according to records on file at the university.

He is now carrying the maximum number of hours allowed for credit in the university, and attends classes without credit, for 20 additional hours a week. He was sent to the university by the Federal Board for Vocational Training.

The "alpha" test given Nolan, was the regular army intelligence test given officers and enlisted men during the war, according to W. R. Wilson, instructor in psychology, who administered it. Nolan had never taken it before. Mr. Wilson said. The major test consisting of eight minor tests, only one of which was to an extent an information test.

Nolan is a wonderful physical specimen, according to physicians.
