

Players Double Crossed 'Fixers'

lose the series in return for $100,000 to be paid by a gambling syndicate.

George Gorman, assistant states attorney, resumed his questions concerning meetings in Cincinnati hotels when Burns took the stand.

"When you were in room 708 of the hotel Sinton the day of the second game, what happened?" asked Gorman.

Demanded $10,000
"Attell and several others were there," answered Burns. "Attell said Rothstein had $200,000 to bet on the series but it was hard to get bets down and he did not want to give me any money. I insisted on at least $10,000. Attell showed me piles of money under a mattress. Forty thousand dollars was due the players then. Attell in talking of Rothstein said Rothstein had a private wire from New York to Cincinnati and some one said that Pittsburgh gamblers were in on the deal. I don't know who said that. Attell, Bennett and Maharg were there. Some one said the Pittsburgh gamblers had a hard time getting money down."

"Attell then took $10,000 from under the mattress and gave it to me."

"I offered it to Maharg. He wouldn't take it. I put it in my shirt and took it up to the players' rooms. I passed 'Kid' Gleason on the way."

Gave Gandil $10,000
"Risberg and McMullin were in the hotel room—I don't recall the others. Later Cicotte and Gandil came in, and I gave the $10,000 to Gandil."

"There were two other players there."

In question and answer form the testimony was as follows, Mr. Gorman conducting the questioning:

What did the players say?
Gandil said they had been double crossed. Attell said they must win the third game—the next—so as to improve the odds, which then were three to two in favor of Chicago, Attell said the odds must be better.

What were Attell's words?
He said if the players would win the third game the odds would change and the players could be paid.

What did the players say?
Gandil said they had lost for a regular pitcher and they wouldn't win for a "busher."

Did they know who was going to pitch the third game?
Yes, Dick Kerr. I then went to the train to go to Chicago.

Before going to Chicago let's go back to New York. Tell the jury of the conversation you had with Cicotte in New York.

The defense objected, citing Judge Friend's ruling yesterday when this conversation was barred.

Judge Friend again barred the conversation for the time being reserving the right to reverse his ruling when the state privately informed him that the alleged conspiracy had its inception at this meeting between Cicotte and Burns.

Planned "Frame Up"
Cicotte and Burns met in the writing room of the Ansonia hotel, discussed the "throwing" of the series and met there again the next day with Maharg and Gandil and decided to get the gamblers to back the deal. Mr. Gorman said in arguing the point.

Burns then resumed his testimony.

Who came to Chicago with you?
Maharg.

Did any of the players come along?
No.

Where did you meet Attill in Chicago?
Sherman hotel.

Anybody with Attell?
No.

Tell us what he said.
He asked about winning the third game. I called up Gandil about it.

What did Gandil say?
Gandil said the game would go the same way.

When did you meet Attell next?
When did you meet Attell next?

of money when Chicago won the third game. I said, I did the same. I met them again at 8:30 p. m. We talked over the games coming. Attell told to see the players and fix things up. Attell said he bet ten or twenty thousand dollars on the third game and lost. He said he would give $45,000 to have the next two games thrown, but wanted to bet it, paying the players $20,000 after the fourth game and $25,000 after the fifth.

What did you do?
I went to the Warner hotel to see the players about ten p. m. Who was there?
Gandil. He said he was through with the deal and wouldn't talk about it. He said they were out to win the rest of the series. Then I saw Reisberg and McMullin. They said the players met before the third game and decided to go out to win.

What did they say?
They said that they had been double-crossed. Risberg said he would go through and throw the games. I said I would see they were paid.

Who did you see then?
Attell—the next day. We went down to a man's room and met Joe Gordon. Some St. Louis man and some other men were there. Attell said he could get $20,000 from some bankers. He said some St. Louis man would put up some of the money.

Just what did the St. Louis man say?
He said he would put half of the money. Then I went to see the players at the Warner. I saw Gandil but he said again he was through. I asked about my cut of the $10,000 I gave him. He said he didn't have the money and that I wouldn't get any. I told him I would tell everything about the game throwing. I went to the Sherman hotel and told Attell it was all off. I had no more talks with Attell about the game. Maharg and I went back to Cincinnati for the last two games there. Then I went back to New York. I never talked with the players in Cincinnati.

Who did you see on the train?
The mayor of Cincinnati and Ring Lardner.

Valuation of Corvallis city property shows an increase of $619,475 over last year, the amount for 1921 being $3,026,185.

Creamer and Lytle to Keep Present Jobs

Governor Olcott has announced that he is re-appointing J. M. Creamer of Portland and Dr. W. H. Lytle of Salem as members of the Oregon state veterinary medical examining board, and that he is appointing C. W. Lassen of Pendleton to succeed T. Notz of Baker as a member of the same board. These appointments will be effective July 21, when the old terms expire.

Dr. Notz, the retiring member, has entered another profession and expressed a desire to no longer be considered as desiring a position on the board. It was understood he would have tendered his resignation some time ago, had not other members of the board urged him to keep up his work until the
