warrants before attempting to enter residences, automobiles or baggage for contraband liquor. The house adopted a substitute which provided that no search of a home shall be made without a search warrant, based on an affidavit setting forth that there was reasonable cause to suspect that liquor was being manufactured on the premises "for sale or sold."

It was said the conferees had prepared a substitute for both amendments requiring a search warrant for search of a residence and penalizing other searches made without warrant, where "good cause" was not shown.

Senator Ashurst authorized a statement saying he was a strong supporter of the anti-beer bill and had participated in the conference Tuesday evening and objected to the house amendment on the ground that it "would legalize the manufacture of distilled and malt spirits in the home for beverage purposes" and would permit "hundreds and even thousands of miniature breweries and distilleries to be set up."

Sale or Sold Eliminated.

The Stanley amendment was unanimously by the senate and is "a restatement of the guarantees contained in the fourth and fifth amendments to the constitution," the statement said, and Senator Ashurst on "observing an evident intention on the part of the conferees to weaken and destroy the effect of the Stanley" amendment announced to the conferees that he would not sign a report which altered the Stanley provision and left the conference not to return "unless the conferees agree to the Stanley amendment in the exact form that it passed the senate."

Senator Sterling, republican, South Dakota, of the senate conferees, said the conference report had not been written, nor the house "for sale or sold" language stricken out "yet."

Phone Rate Cut Would Hurt Help

Hickman Says Company Would Have To Slash Working Forces Under Lower Tariff

A reduction in telephone rates at this time would be followed by a reduction in the number of employees on the payroll of the telephone company in Portland.

This was the intimation thrown out by C. E. Hickman, commercial superintendent for the Oregon division of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company, on the witness stand in the telephone rate rehearing this morning.

Hickman inter explained that any attempt to reduce the present rate schedule would necessarily mean the instant curtailment of the expansion program upon which the company had launched in Portland following the granting of the new rates of last March.

Unemployment Predicted.

Hickman was under cross-examination by Attorney Tomlinson for the city of Portland. Tomlinson was contending that the increased rates had driven many former patrons of the company to discontinue their telephone service.

"Don't you think a reduction in the rate would enable the company to recover a lot of business from those who can not now afford to pay the higher rate," Tomlinson asked.

"I think a reduction in the rate would have just the opposite effect," Hickman insisted. "While we might pick up a few subscribers on that basis it would mean the loss of many more through unemployment that would necessarily follow such a move."

Rate Fixing Explained.

The amount the traffic will bear does not enter in any way into the fixing of telephone rates, according to C. E. Hickman, commercial superintendent for the Oregon division of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company, on the witness stand in the telephone rate rehearing this morning.

Attorney Tomlinson for the city of Portland had intimated that such was the policy of the telephone company in preparing its rate schedule when Hickman, on the witness stand, under cross-examination, indignantly denied that any such policy was followed by the Pacific company.

sue the telephone users to visit the exchanges for an inspection of the plant, the telephone company now plans to take the switchboard out to the people.

The purpose of this, according to Mr. Hickman, is to educate the people into a better understanding of the telephone problems with a view to fostering better co-operation in the interest of better telephone service.

Growers Clean Up Coast Stock Of 1920 Prunes

Cleaning up all of their prunes on the coast, the Oregon Growers Cooperative association sold three quarters of a million pounds of prunes last week, at a half cent advance over recent quotations.

The association still has stocks of prunes unsold in the eastern markets where they have been stored in readiness for distribution when buyers will meet the prices at which they are being held. Indications are that these stocks will be entirely cleaned up by the first to the fifteenth of October.

Some future sales are also being reported on the 1921 crop of prunes. R. C. Paulus, general manager of the association, is of the opinion that most of the small sizes of the Oregon, Washington and California crop will be taken by European buyers this year.

A representative of the merchandise department of a large banking house in Hamburg is at present in Portland for the purpose of buying Petite prunes for shipment to Germany, which is again coming into the market.

Police Warned to Watch for Beggar Booze Operators

Salem police have been warned by Albany officers to be on the lookout for two men reported to be purchasing wood alcohol, concocting it into bootleg liquor and selling it.

According to the Albany report the men, one of whom is crippled and feigns blindness, beg for alms on the plea that they are trying to get money to start a store, thus getting the capital necessary to buy the raw materials for their booze.

Richard Hanson, the elder of the two men is described as being about 50 years of age, crippled and wearing a gray suit. His companion, who goes by the name of John Doe, is about 35, of dark complexion and wears a cap and dark clothes.

Suicide Attempt Blocked

Hospital Inmate Is Rescued From River After Death Plunge from Bridge

After dropping into the channel of the Willamette river from the steel railroad bridge, J. W. Bluck, inmate of the state hospital, was saved from death by drowning yesterday afternoon by the prompt action of A. L. Godfrey, who succeeded in catching the drowning man with the ear of a boat in which he had hurried to the rescue as Bluck was sinking to his death.

The body had completely disappeared from sight, but by a thrust of the ear in a spot where many bubbles were rising to the surface, Godfrey happened to get the ear blade under the arm of the drowning man and drew him to safety in an unconscious state.

Beginning the work of resuscitation in the rowboat, Godfrey succeeded in bringing the drowned man back to consciousness in about 10 minutes, after the boat had drifted down the river past the Hunt Brothers cannery.

According to Godfrey, who lives at 157 Union street, he was down at the river's edge gathering wood directly under the railroad bridge at about 2:30 o'clock, when he heard a splash in the channel about 150 feet from shore. Looking out, he saw the coat and hat of the man, but thinking that someone perhaps had thrown some old clothes in the river he did not realize the truth of the situation until he saw the man move.

Jumping in the boat, close at hand he hurried to the scene and overtook the body, drifting with the current and held up by the air in the clothing, just as it began to settle about 150 feet below the bridge. There is said to be that he made the fortunate thrust with the ear after the man had disappeared from sight.

On reviving the drowning man Godfrey rowed back to the foot of the bridge, where police and others had gathered on the summons of George Bessel, a truck driver, who had seen the attempt at suicide from the Marlon-Polk county bridge. Bluck was taken to the city jail where medical treatment was given.

It was not until later that the police learned that Bluck was an
