Grain Growers Attack Freight Rates as Unjust

Washington, Aug. 20.—After five days of testimony regarding the agricultural situation in the west, grain men began today before the interstate commerce commission an attack, through testimony of traffic experts, on the entire freight rates structure on grain and hay maintained by western railroads.

Previously attorneys for the grain men, farmers and shippers, had described suffering of the farmers, which they declared was due in large part of high freight rates.

Rate experts were called today to show that the rates on grain as compared on other commodities were unreasonably high and that the commission should therefore, reduce rates even if it was not convinced that such a reduction would increase the revenues of the carriers through increased volume of traffic.

An Early Fashion Review Women's Silk Dresses

Autumn Dresses—yes; rich in color tones; charming in their originality of design and yet the silken tissues of which they are made, in many instances are as airy as warm August and September days would require.

And even the Georgette crepe affairs will be worn right through the winter—for milady buys her frock for its soft femininity rather than its protectiveness—the coat and the furs will care for that.

These are charming gowns for immediate service by women who demand the new styles first.
