Before this can be done, it is everywhere, ecessary for the English hops to be harvested and shipped to the government warehouse with a statement from the British grower as to the cost of production. The hops are then graded by the board of control, the average cost is estimated, the price set, and allottments made to the brewers, according to their brewing capacity. When this is done, American hops will be allowed in Britain.

The idea of the board of control is to protect the English grower against American competition, for in spite of the lower labor costs and lower standards of living in England, the United States can produce hops cheaper than the British isles, for the reason that there is a heavier yield to the acre.

Last year the board of control fixed the price for hops close to a dollar a pound, but the British hop growers were dissatisfied aid complained that the price brought no return.

Few hop shipments from the Pacific coast are made by water through the Panama canal, hop men state, for the reason that they do not keep and because this means of transportation requires a most expensive layout in prepara-tion, so that most of the hops are handled by transcontinental rail-

More than 9,800,000 pounds of prunes were grown in Douglas county this year.
