

OREGON TO SEND 3 TO SERVICES

Olcott Names Veterans to Represent This State at Funeral for Unknown Hero

According to announcement by Governor Olcott today Captain Cicero F. Hogan and John C. Burgard of Portland and Howard M. Wight, professor of the Oregon Agricultural college, all ex-service men, have been selected to officially represent Oregon in the funeral procession in honor of the unknown soldier who will be buried in Arlington cemetery, Va., on Armistice day, November 11.

The appointments are made on the request of Secretary of War John W. Weeks for three men to represent this state at the ceremony in which tribute will be paid to the nation's unknown dead in the world war. The men will attend the ceremony as guests of the federal government with all expenses, including transportation and hotel, paid by the government.

Captain Cicero F. Hogan entered the national guard as a private and first entered federal service as a Lieutenant in troop A, Oregon cavalry, on the Mexican border. At the outbreak of the world war he was in charge of volunteer recruiting for the national guard in Portland until ordered overseas with the Oregon cavalry which later became part of the 148th field artillery of the 66th brigade. Arriving in France in February of 1918 he went to the front with his regiment and served continuously, being in all the major engagements in France. After the armistice he was sent to the army of occupation with the Oregon men and served on the Rhine until May, 1919, when he was placed on duty at Paris. He remained in the army until next year because of broken health resulting from long combat service. Leaving the army he took up the practice of law at Portland.

John C. Burgard, first lieutenant, 342 infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Epinoyville, France, September 27, 1918. On duty as battalion liaison officer, Lieutenant Burgard was establishing the battalion post of command at daybreak, when he suddenly discovered a party of the enemy placing machine guns so as to fire upon the position from the flank. Firing a rifle to give the alarm, Lieutenant Burgard advanced toward the enemy, followed by the battalion headquarters group, whom he led in a vigorous attack on the hostile force, capturing 21 of the enemy, 1 machine gun and 2 light machine rifles, with but one casualty among his own men. Residence at apartment, 619 Hillcrest Drive, Portland, Or.

Howard M. Wight, private, company J, 361st infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Gesnos, France, September 28, 1918. When his battalion withdrew after attacking a hostile position under heavy fire, Private Wight, instead of falling back, organized a party and in the face of intense machine-gun fire rescued 15 wounded soldiers who would otherwise have fallen into the hands of the enemy. He placed the wounded men in a gravel pit and remained the entire night, administering first aid, despite the fact that he himself was nearly exhausted after three days of fighting. Residence at enlistment, Corvallis, Or.

Agriculture In High Schools Is Success, Claim

Vocational agriculture in the high schools is steadily advancing in the estimation of school people, according to E. E. Elliott, director of the state board for vocational education, who has just completed a tour of supervision through the eastern portion of the state.

Last year there were only seven departments of vocational agriculture with an aggregate enrollment of 191 students in high schools east of the Cascades while this year 12 schools are offering courses in vocational agriculture under the provisions of the Smith-Hughes act with material increases in the enrollments in the schools which have been offering the course heretofore.

To date a total of 23 high schools in Oregon have adopted courses in vocational agriculture, employing a total of 24 instructors all of whom, with three exceptions, are Oregon Agricultural college graduates. The state board is giving preference to men trained in Oregon institutions wherever possible.

Armistice Day Oregon Holiday

Armistice day, November 11, will be a legal holiday throughout Oregon. A proclamation to this effect was issued by Governor Olcott Tuesday.

In his proclamation the governor points out that some difference of opinion has arisen as to whether the legislature designated Armistice day as a legal holiday or merely a school holiday. It is plain, however, that the legislature assembly, following a recommendation from the executive office, contemplated that such day should be forever a legal holiday in this state.

Epidemic of Mumps Visits City

Salem is at present pretty well in the grip of an epidemic of mumps, it was indicated today.

Fear of mumps and other diseases spreading was largely responsible for the Salem school board's action last night in hiring a physician and nurse to operate in the schools.

Despite the fact that mumps, as a rule, causes but little discomfort to the patient, officers today urged all persons afflicted to report the cases immediately. Failure to do so is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine.

Two Days Only Tomorrow — Saturday THE SYMBOL OF A WOMAN'S FAITH

On the day that she bade her lover good-bye, she placed a lamp in her window to guide him back to her.

And then, through the years she waited, patient, faithful, true—for the man who never came; waited with a heart full of trust and devotion.

Day and night the lamp burned with a clear, unflinching flame. So, too, burned her love, serene and strong.

Such faith as Mary Ainslie's is rare indeed. It is the theme of a book which has charmed and delighted thirty million readers.
