Monmouth High School Holds Pie Social Wednesday. Monmouth, Oct. 29.—The Monmouth high school held a pie social Tuesday evening to raise funds for athletic purposes. A jazz orchestra and vaudeville features furnished entertainment for the pie eaters.

A series of entertainments have been planned to assist in paying for the two and one half acre athletic field which the students purchased last spring.

35 Lives Are Lost. (Continued from Page One.) dated a section of the town of Port Coquitlam, 14 miles east of here. The river overflowed its banks last night, and by washing away a Canadian Pacific railway bridge, cut rail communication between this city and interior points. A railway bridge over the Stave river also was swept away. At Coquitlam, according to messages, a hotel, store and several cottages were carried from their foundations.

Wire communication with Britannia Beach is cut off, and details of the disaster are meager. The first message was relayed by a lineman.

A cloudburst is described to have washed out a fill, releasing a great wall of water, which rushed down to the bay, carrying everything before it. With the town cut in two, a raging torrent still runs between the two sections, making communication between them impossible.

Senate Asks Access Into Tax Returns

Washington, Oct. 29.—Income tax returns made to the treasury by corporations would be open to inspection at the request of either house of congress under an amendment to the tax revision bill adopted today by the senate without a record vote.

The senate accepted a compromise amendment striking out the provision imposing a tax of 50 cents on surety bonds and on all policies of guaranty and fidelity insurance, including policies guaranteeing titles to real estate and mortgage guaranties policies. Senator Calder, republican, New York, offered an amendment to the corporation tax section exempting from the 15 per cent corporation tax on corporations "organized exclusively for co-operative home ownership."

Methodists Put Dalles Area In New Conference

The Dalles, Or., Oct. 29.—The Dalles district of the Methodist church, comprising 11 counties in Oregon and Washington, with the exception of Milton and Sunnyside churches in Umatilla county, and including White Salmon, Appleton and Goldendale churches in Washington, were Friday transferred from the Columbia river conference to the Oregon conference.

The action was taken at a meeting of a commission composed of representatives of each conference held in the local Methodist church.

The following committeemen were present: Oregon conference members—W. W. Youngson, chairman, Portland; R. N. Avison, Forest Grove, secretary; E. E. Gilbert, superintendent of Salem district; S. A. Danford, superintendent of the southern Oregon district; D. H. Leech of Eugene. Columbia river conference members—Gabriel Sykes, chairman, Hood River; A. A. Callender, secretary, Colfax, Wash.; J. W. Caughlan, Walla Walla; H. F. Pemberton, superintendent of The Dalles district.

W. B. Young of Ellensburg, also a committeeman of the conference was not present at the meeting. The transfer is subject to the approval of Bishop Shepard, and approved will become effective September 1, 1922.

Delano Changes Building Front. In line with improvement made on High street, across from the county court house, Fred G. Delano is installing a plate glass front in the building occupied by the Salem Automobile company which is handling the agency of the Chevrolet motor car. The glass windows on both sides of the entry are 7x12 feet, the owner at present contemplating a marble base, and is a great improvement over the former appearance of the building. Mr. Delano states that sometime in the future he is going to extend both stories of the building back to the alley which will give him approximately 6000 square feet in addition to handling service on the 1000 cars now in this district made by the Chevrolet company.

Ten Millions In Gold Still Lost At Sea

Representatives of All Factions Meet In Chicago. London, Oct. 29.—After her fourth year of effort to salvage the $20,000,000 of gold lost in the liner Laurentic, the Racer has been laid up until next April, when she will resume operations. It was on January 23, 1917, that the Laurentic, a magnificent liner, struck a mine and sank in Lough Swilly, off one of the wildest parts of the west coast of Ireland, in over twenty fathoms of water.

Ship Covered by Sand. The same summer salvage operations were started on her. But there was a great initial difficulty on account of the swift silting up of the sand. Only by luck the wreck found at all—two millions came across a mound of sand, and by chance they saw a piece of metal protruding. The mound—not much more than ten feet high, but covering some hundreds of square feet—was the Laurentic.

It became necessary to place rings of explosives on the exposed plates and cut out a section, exposing girders and more plates below, and these in turn had to be cut through by dynamite until the layer containing the gold was reached. So great had the pressure of the sand been however, that the strong room, previously about twelve feet high, had been pressed out to the height of a few inches and the ingots, in consequence, scattered over a wide area.

Half is Recovered. However, by the fall of 1920 over $5,000,000 in gold had been recovered and nearly as much again during the present summer has been transferred from the depths of the Atlantic to the vaults of the Bank of England.

Whether it will be possible to recover any of the balance next summer is a matter of doubt. Four years at the mercy of the Atlantic rollers have reduced her to scrap iron, and it is difficult to tell the stern from the bow. The accumulation of sand has also become an increasingly difficult proposition. Only by the installation of three powerful pumps each capable of sucking up sand at the rate of one ton per second, has it been possible to proceed with the work at all.

But if the total sum can be regained from the twisted heap of iron it will constitute the greatest piece of salvage work ever known.

Smallox Control Waits Upon Voters

Washington, Oct. 29.—Smallox, according to the United States Public Health service, depends on the popular vote.

The disease is today negligible in communities where popular sentiment has sustained a strong centralized compulsory vaccination act, but has shown a tendency to rise where local authorities have been given discretionary powers as to enforcement of the prevailing vaccination laws. And where vaccination laws have lacked compulsory features, or there have been no laws, the rate is high.

The better the status of vaccination in the law, said the Public Health service, the lower is the smallox rate. In those states where vaccination of school children is generally required smallox is rare, averaging three cases a year for a community of a hundred thousand inhabitants, whereas in the States where there is such requirement 113 cases a year is the average for each hundred thousand persons.
