

Throngs Pass Bier

In English soil, brought over as living plants.

From the Grand Army of United Veterans of Canada came a wreath placed by Senator Richardson, oldest living wearer of the Victoria Cross. There were flowers from Newfoundland and from the army and navy war veterans of Canada came a memorial woven of poppies that bloom in Flanders fields and beside all the civil dignitaries Great Britain sent to pay homage went Earl Beatty, admiral of the fleet, Air Vice Marshal Higgins and others whose roles in the war in which this unknown soldier died were great.

Just at 8 o'clock the great main doors, huge bronze barriers, embellished with intricate figures and designs and long ago given the American republic, strangely enough, by France, on whose soil the soldier died, swung back and the waiting hundreds stepped upward four abreast to pass by the casket.

As the first line stepped within the hall from the group beside the bier, where the flowers were being set in place male voices rose in blended harmonies that awoke the echoes in the high, vaulted roof above, now flooded with sunlight. They sang the last verse of "America":

"Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light."

They sang with a peal of victory and no hint of sorrow, and the last notes died away down the long corridors to right and left as the line moved slowly on and out the western entrance, down over the terraced slopes that face out with the white gleam of Washington monument straight ahead and still behind, seemingly cut through the center by the great shaft, the square white bulk of Lincoln memorial on the far brim of the Potomac.

About the casket on its low base those who passed by saw the five soldiers, still as though carved from bronze in their khaki tunings. At the head, arms rigid at his sides, his own head bent forward until the tan brim of his cap hid his eyes, stood the non-commissioned officer, the red of his chevrons coloring his sleeve. At each corner, facing inward to the center, stood a soldier, rifle butt grounded on the stone flagging, body rigidly erect, but also with head bent forward until cap brim was level with the point of his gleaming bayonet.

By 10 o'clock a steady stream of people—soldiers, men, women and children, white and black—had begun a continuous march through the grounds.

Secretary Weeks, Assistant Secretary Wainwright and General Harbord, were on hand waiting to receive foreign delegations. Floral designs from every state, on each of which was the state's shield, completely circled the rotunda.

All delegations came in from the north entrance and stood by the catafalque for the ceremony as the line continued to stream through.

Society

Mrs. Bernardi Hi Club Hostess

Mrs. J. A. Bernardi was hostess yesterday for members of the Hi Five Hundred club who gathered at her home for an afternoon of cards. Mrs. Mem Pearce was an additional guest. Patriotic decorations were used about the rooms and consisted of flags, red, white and blue streamers and fall flowers in keeping with the scheme. High score was won by Mrs. Fred Bernardi and low score fell to Mrs. William Kaerth. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Fred Bernardi. The society will meet again in two weeks with Mrs. E. P. Donaldson.

D. of V. Have Annual Inspection

Annual inspection for Barbara Freitchele tent, number two, Daughters of Veterans was held last night when Mrs. Frances McLeod and Mrs. Lyda Wendlick, state officers, were present. Mrs. Frances McKay, department president of Washington, was also here for the occasion. Tents of this organization will soon be instituted in Vancouver and Albany. Following the usual business of the evening, a short social time was observed and luncheon was served at the Spa. Visiting officers were presented with corsage bouquets as a courtesy of the local tent.

Will Attend Game at Corvallis

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Kellog will drive to Corvallis tomorrow to spend home coming week end on the college campus.

O. A. C. Club Postpones Meeting

The meeting of the O. A. C., which was announced for tonight at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Chambers, has been postponed a week not to conflict with homecoming week end, being observed on the Corvallis campus.

THREE years of peace have passed—three years of reconstruction. Surely, we as a nation, have much to be thankful for—much to console ourselves that our plight is not greater or our burden more wearisome.

Peace on earth has been finally established. So let us offer cheer to the sorrowful, bounty to the needy, and balm to the stricken. In this spirit let us celebrate this Armistice Day Anniversary.

And let us hope that the conclusions of the Disarmament conference, called by President Harding, will pave the way to the eradication of war and that all its accompanying scourges will be effaced from this earth; that the term "brotherhood of man" will bear a more definite meaning than mere words.

Let us make this a day worth remembering, as sacred and memorable as our national holiday—the Fourth of July. And let us rejoice that November brings forth two great days of thanksgiving—Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day.
