

DE VALERA IS RAPPED BY PAPERS

Personal Element Injected Into Treaty Discussion, Claim of Irish Press

Dublin, Jan. 7.—(By Associated Press.)—Acute suspense and anxiety over the chances for peace prevailed in Ireland today as the result of Eamon DeValera's unexpected action yesterday in resigning as president of the Irish republic.

Few among the Irish people are willing to doubt the sincerity of his action, but the general regard for him does not prevent many expressions of regret at his course. In the view of supporters of the peace treaty, his action has seriously imperiled the chances for peace. It was the opinion of several members of the Dail that a vote on the treaty would be taken before 7 o'clock tonight.

People Want Peace.
That acceptance of the treaty is considered paramount, despite the general respect for Mr. DeValera, is shown by the comments in the morning papers, which appealed to the people over the president's head.

"The people are not to be misled," said the Freeman's Journal. "They have read the treaty; they have read documents two and three. They are simply shocked that it should be proposed to plunge them into turmoil for differences between two proposals and the treaty, and sooner or later the people will decide."

The Irish Independent says: "Mr. DeValera said very properly that he could not allow personal consideration of any sort to have anything to do with the situation, and then dramatically announced his resignation. It is true that he said he had decided to take that step because of fundamental differences in the cabinet and later withdrew his resignation on the understanding that a vote on Arthur Griffith's motion for approval of the treaty would be taken today."

Personal Issue Raised.
"Undoubtedly the incident has raised the personal issue and, taking circumstances into account, we do not think the main proposition should have been complicated by introduction of the question of resignation."

The Irish Times declares: "It is unthinkable that a small minority in the Dail can be permitted to bring ruin to Ireland and rob her of the happiness and power the treaty puts in her hands. Peace and war are national issues. In this crisis the advocates of settlement in the Dail represent the nation and if they are defeated in the Dail, the issue must be referred to the nation."

The political writer of the Freeman's Journal says:

"Despite the unequivocal demand of the Irish people for ratification, the treaty is in terrible and tragic peril. Their hopes, however, are decidedly brightened by Mr. DeValera's extraordinary line of action in flinging his resignation like a bomb shell in the faces of the public."

Major General Harbord, who has been acting chief of staff, left on a 7000-mile inspection tour with Assistant Secretary Wainwright, thus leaving General McRae as acting chief of the general staff.

Her story is this: A few days ago she received a box and a letter. In the box was a pistol and a c-r-on containing nine cartridges.

"Three of the bullets were missing, others had been cut into dum dum bullets," she said last night. "In a letter the fellow said the missing three were meant for me and that he hoped to soon see my body floating down the Chicago river."
