Death of Others Is Expected

way to the civilian forces. Marines rushed to the theater a few hours after the crash Saturday night were withdrawn before dawn and soldiers from Fort Myer, who had struggled through miles of snow Saturday night to reach the scene, began leaving.
All dead and injured had been removed early today from the Christian Science church nearby which for more than 36 hours had served as a clearing house for victims of the disaster.
Rescue Work Difficult.
Washington, Jan. 30.—With a total of 107 dead and 133 injured removed from the ruins of the Knickerbocker motion picture theater at an early hour today, the rescuers still were struggling with the heavy wreckage left when the snow laden roof of the structure collapsed during the showing of a comedy feature bill Saturday night.
Brigadier General Bandholtz, commander of federal troops in the district, in personal charge of the rescue work, said it might be 24 hours before it could be said definitely there were no more dead or injured.
It was believed, however, that the section now being explored would yield few additional to the awful list of dead and injured, it being near the rear and under the part of the balcony which held up when the front of it crashed upon the theatre pit beneath the impact of the falling roof.
Man Believed Alive.
A party of the rescuer, early today had struggled for hours to release from the part of the wreckage now being overturned, one man believed to be yet alive, although imprisoned under the mass for nearly thirty-six hours. The great weight of the steel beams and concrete which crashed with the roof have in many instances made the rescue of victims harrowing slow and difficult.
The capital city was bowed in grief today to learn the full extent of the tragedy with the recovery of victims yesterday and last night. This was the more intensely shared by the rest of the country because of the considerable number of visitors who suffered in the catastrophe.
President Harding, in a statement last night, said the tragedy had left him with the "same inexpressible sorrow which has come to all Washington and which will be sympathetically felt throughout the land."
Investigation Started.
A three-fold investigation of the cause and circumstances of the collapse of the theater roof was in prospect today. In addition to an exhaustive inquiry ordered by the board of commissioners of the district and another to be started immediately by the grand juror, Senator Capper of Kansas, member of the senate District of Columbia committee, announced that as soon as the senate convened he would introduce a resolution calling for an investigation of the tragedy. The senator said he had received reports that the building code of the district had been violated in more than a few instances during the rush of construction resulting from the rapid increase of population here after the war declaration.
Victims Prominent.
Edward H. Shaughnessy, second assistant postmaster general, who was among the fourteen listed as seriously injured, was still making a fight for life today at the Walter Reed hospital. His wife and two daughters also were injured, but not so seriously.
Among those prominent on the list of dead as it stood today, was former Representative A. J. Barnfield, formerly of Pittsburg, and Mrs. Virginia Barrard, sister of Minister Bianchi of Guatemala.
Most of the dead still lay early today in the basement of the nearby Christian Science church, to which they were removed for identification. Many of the fatally injured also were taken there, later to swell the total of victims.
It is evident that, in the matter of reparations, Germany thinks little is right.
Well, buying the farmer's corn for Russia is one way to let charity begin at home.

My word! Look who's getting kidded now!
