Walla Walla Spinach is on the market at 15 cents a pound. It is the first appearance for some time of spinach of good quality and will be generally distributed thru out the trade by tomorrow.

The cheese associations have been talking shortage for some time, and there has been some fluctuation in prices on the Portland market. Local retail prices of 30 and 35 cents a pound have remained firm.

The price paid by local retailers for potatoes is within the general market price. A price of $1.32 was paid by the government a short time ago at Bremerton, Wash. This places the $1.50 quotation here a little above the market, below Yakima quotations. The prices to the consumer is $2 per hundred pounds.

A secret of cooking that Colonial housewives knew

THE wives of early Colonial settlers found that maple syrup—unlike anything they had ever known—gave a new and delightful flavor, as well as sweetness, to their pies and puddings. Indeed the secret of many of their famed dishes was—the maple taste.

And now Log Cabin Syrup makes it possible for you to get this wonderful flavor in your cooking—at any time of year, with economy.

It gives sweetness—and exquisite flavor

Log Cabin is made from the choicest of New England maple combined with the best from Canadian groves—the real sugars of maple in which the flavor is most intense. This is blended with just enough pure sugar of cane—and nothing else—to make Log Cabin

Syrup surpassingly sweet and most delicate in maple flavor.

When you use Log Cabin for the sweetening, your old dessert recipes take on a new goodness. For custards, puddings, pies and ice-creams, it gives that "different" taste which everyone likes.

It makes such luscious cake-frostings, such toothsome candies. Sweeten your morning's grapefruit with Log Cabin. And, of course, you'll use it on pancakes and French toast.

Get a can of Log Cabin Syrup at your grocer's today and see how the old Colonial secret of cooking will lend new delight to the foods you serve. Log Cabin Syrup comes only in log-cabin-shaped cans. There are three sizes. The Log Cabin Products Company, St. Paul, Minn.
