Proposed Ordinance

police, do not. At the present time a chief may do as he wishes, regardless of what other officials advise."

Hal Patton, one of the members of the ordinance committee, felt similarly.

"Under the present system," he pointed out, "the chief takes orders from nobody but himself, and believe the new plan is a good one."

Schunke Favors Move.

Ed Schunke, the third member of the ordinance committee, also declared himself in favor of the proposed plan.

Joseph Baumgartner, known to be one of the most cautious members of the council, was another who approves the "appointive" plan. "I believe we'd get far better results," he said this morning.

"I have given the matter but little consideration, but I am of the opinion that it would be better to have the chief of police officiate an appointive one," said George Wenderoth, another alderman.

"The plan, however, might have its drawbacks."

A. H. Moore, another councilman, endorses the movement. "We have discussed this on several occasions, and I believe the plan is sound," he declared.

Car Expense Heavy.

Action of the ordinance committee in introducing the new bill recalls a rather heated challenge flung at the police committee at the last council meeting by Alderman Vandevort, who contended that the expenses of the newly purchased police car were far in excess of what they should be.

"I want to hear from the police committee," Mr. Vandevort demanded. "I thought we bought this police car with a view to saving the city money. Now I find that it has covered 1500 miles at an expense of no less than six cents a mile. We used to kick when our taxi bill was $50, yet we are now faced by a bill approximating $90."

The answer of Mr. Thompson, chairman of the police committee, was rather cryptic.

Chief "Instructed."

"I think we know, at least, what we thought we bought the car for," he explained. "Our instructions to the chief were along that line. We'll investigate and see what we can do." What the police committee was able to do is not known.

Efforts to get in touch with Alderman Vandevort were today unavailing, but it is believed that he will lend his support to the proposed plan.

High Waters Disrupt Train Service Today

Walla, Walla, Wash., Feb. 17.—High water in small streams usually quiet and docile have caused the railroad officials in this city, Pendleton and Pasco considerable annoyance and much inconvenience to the traveling public as there was no train to Pendleton over the O-W-R. & N. Friday and the morning train from Pendleton did not make the trip over the usual route, but was made up at Umatilla and arrived slightly late.

All the trouble was caused by two washouts near Saxe where the embankment was carried away and this will have to be cribbed, C. F. Van De Water, general freight and passenger agent of the line, announced this morning. It was expected that it would be completed and the afternoon trip from Spokane was expected to get through.

The morning train from Pasco arrived over the Northern Pacific this morning, S. J. Miller, general freight and general passenger agent of the line, said. The regular morning freight train to that place was also annulled. The trouble was caused by several streams, usually dry, going on the rampage and causing washouts of the embankment near Eureka. The train due here early in the morning started from Pasco but was forced to return. It was announced that the 3:20 p. m. train would probably get through and passengers due to arrive early in the morning will be brought through on that train.

According to reports from the hills, the waters began receding about 3 a. m. today and danger from further washouts is believed to be past.
