What's New on the Market

By REX STEWART

Next fall when eggs are around 80 cents a dozen, those housewives who have not already done so, will regret not having taken advantage of the present low price of eggs and preserve some in waterglass for cooking purposes. A quart of waterglass can be purchased for 30 cents and will take care of 15 to 18 dozen eggs. Stone jars are best for containers, but paraffine lined kegs can be used and are much cheaper. Eggs are now retailing at 20 cents a dozen.

Poultry receipts are fair this week and while there may be some rise in price in the larger centers with the approach of Easter, it is doubtful if there will be any change here. The retail price is quoted at 38 and 40 cents.

California grapefruit is selling at five cents each, quite reasonable and as cheap as they usually get. The much better Florida stuff is selling two for 25 cents.

Nice green onions are on the market now at 10 cents a bunch; rhubarb is high at 20 cents a bunch; spinach green, 10 cents, are in good condition; celery is 25 cents a bunch and is rather scrubby stuff.
