Negro Klansmen

According to James L. Beavers, chief of police at Atlanta, Ga. and candidate for mayor, Edward Young Clarke, acting Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan has completed negotiations with Marcus Garvey, "president of Africa" and head of half a dozen negro enterprises, to admit negroes to the klan. Clarke is quoted as saying that the "negro question has ceased to be" and that "the klan is not fighting the Jew, but is trying to get the Gentile to take on some of the traits of the Jews." Mr. Clarke has not denied the truth of these assertions.

In view of the fact that the Klan has now a woman's adjunct, and also a foreign born auxiliary organization, and is as well trying to unite in one order all anti-Catholic organizations, the admittance of negroes to the klan, either directly or indirectly, should cause no surprise. Mr. Clarke has proved himself a very adroit and able organizer when it comes to devising schemes for raking in the shekels and one who has no scruples as to how it is done.

The fact that Mr. Clarke declares that the Klan has ceased its war upon the Jews leads to the supposition that a Jewish auxiliary to the Klan may be in process of organization. All that remains to organize then will be the Catholics, and if the acting Imperial Wizard lives long enough, undoubtedly he will devise some scheme of making the Knights of Columbus an adjunct of the Klan to separate them from the mazzuma.

Political Chaos

The fruit of the direct primary is becoming more apparent with every election. Party solidarity and party responsibility have been shattered. Both old parties are disintegrating. There is little leadership and less principle. Personality has replaced purpose and neither party stands for anything except office.

In Oregon, party has degenerated to a label. Religious fanaticism has side-tracked taxation and other issues. Every candidate has a platform of his own and no two platforms are alike. Invisible government has replaced party responsibility. Sectarianism has routed partisanship. Candidates refuse to accept the decision of the majority, defy statutes and wave the banner of bigotry. Secret ballots are issued by secret societies and blindly followed upon appeal to prejudice. The great issue of the state political campaign is a proposal to deprive parents of religious liberty and make children wards of the state.

In other states, Lodge is renominated in Massachusetts by a heavy majority as a reactionary stand-patter, following a landslide for La Follette in Wisconsin as a radical. Townsend in Michigan is successful as a supporter of Newberryism, while Beveridge in Indiana is nominated as a protest against Newberryism. France in Maryland, who champions the Soviet, and supported the tariff, is victorious, as is Hiram Johnson, a Hearst republican who prates socialism and makes his campaign in behalf of high tariff in California, while McCumber author of the tariff bill is defeated for the republican nomination in North Dakota and a Non-Partisan Leaguer wins the nomination. The "Old Guard" is over-turned by Pinchot in Pennsylvania, though he supports the tariff, while a socialist wins the republican nomination in Iowa.

This is the fruit of the direct primary.

Every party and every faction, from socialist to capitalist, from radical to stand-patter, from liberal to fanatic, masquerades under party labels and discards party principles. Irreconcilable conflicts are going on everywhere. As the New York World says under the caption of "Chaos that calls itself politics":

"Apparently the primary has destroyed the need of party unity and transformed every question into a local issue. Anything is Republicanism that can carry a Republican primary, and nobody feels the need of finding a common denominator. While Government and all other undertakings have been undergoing a process of centralization, politics has been decentralized to an extent that has left party names and party labels well-nigh meaningless."

Little "Zeke" Bear Mascot Company F. at Home In Salem

Little "Zeke" bear has started in on a new kind of life, that of mascot for company F, Oregon National guard. "Zeke" is finding the new life mighty strange, but he thinks he is going to like it just the same. His advent to the new way of living happened like this: "Zeke" began life out in the mountains near the coast. He thought he was leading an ideal existence growing up into a tough, ignorant little bear cub. Then a hunter appeared, shot "Zeke's" mother and chased the frightened little cub up a tree.

But the hunter didn't stop there. He followed "Zeke" right up the tree and all the cub's efforts to get him to give up the chase proved useless. The hunter followed "Zeke" all the way to the top of the tree, and dragged the squalling little bear down by the legs. Meanwhile "Zeke" kept making vigorous protests, but they were unheeded.

But the hunter brought "Zeke" over to Salem where he was purchased by Sergeant Harry Platt, in charge of the national guard company. Then life for "Zeke" really began. He is having the time of his life and is learning things too.

For instance He knows that he has a splendid lightning left hook, with his dagger teeth—but he knows that every time he tries to use it someone is going to land on him with a mailed fist. He knows that milk grows in bottles, and that it tastes mighty comforting to his little bear stomach. And his knowledge doesn't end here. It is growing all the time.

Perhaps this is the reason that F company is bursting with pride over being the foster father of such a cute little bear baby. Anyway, both "Zeke" and company F appear to be enjoying the relationship, and "Zeke" continues to make his home at the national guard armory.

LAD FROM SCHOOL ESCAPES

Charles Lerson, 18 years of age, of the state training school for boys, yesterday disappeared from the home of E. T. Prescott, 541 Mill street, according to Mr. Prescott's complaint to the police.

Young Lerson had been in the employ of Mr. Prescott. The youth's description was furnished to officers who were searching for him today.

WHAT HAPPENED When Sheila Elliston Refused Love

By IDA H. McCLONE GIBSON

The Honeymoon Wanes

Sheila turned suddenly hard and cold and white as marble.

She looked first at Phil and then at me, as though, from fright, she had suddenly lost all power to speak or even think coherently.

A spasm of pain passed over Phil's face, but he said nothing. Neither did he make an attempt to raise Sheila from where she was kneeling by my chair—her terror-stricken face raised to mine.

"I do not want children," she exclaimed when she was able to talk. "At least I do not want them now. Surely, Phil, you are not ready to take on the responsibility of children either, are you? Say you do not want them."

"Every man—every decent man who loves a woman looks ahead with reverence and joy to the child that she shall see lying on her breast—the child that will be the visible sign of his love for her and her love for him."

Phil faltered over the last words, and his voice dropped as he came forward and gently lifted his wife and almost carried her the few steps to the divan where he had been sitting.

"But you know, Phil, that I love you. You certainly know that it is not because I do not love you that I do not want children."

Phil did not answer. He hardly seemed to have heard her. He just spoke as though he was continuing what he had begun.

"I expect there is a great deal of pride, as well as love, in the desire of every man to perpetuate his name. Every man worthy of the title wishes to hand the name his father gave him on to his sons. It is an inherent desire as strong as the desire for the woman you have claimed for your own. Indeed, it is stronger than any passion of love. It is the universal desire that nature implants in man to beget that life which will insure the immortality of the race."

Phil was speaking almost imperceptibly—my heart was beating like a trip-hammer—what was it that had loomed up so suddenly dark and forbidding between these two whom I loved?

"You too, Sheila, must have had this same feeling, for it is the one great law that nature has put upon everything that lives, and you are very human. You"—Phil stumbled—"you surely must want a child, a child that shall tell to the world that because two people have loved he lives to carry on."

Sheila looked up rather wildly. "There, Kay, you see what I have often told you. Men are much more sentimental and romantic than women." Although her voice was hollow and insincere one look at Phil's hurt face was too much for me. I turned and fled.

I do not know what happened after I left the room, for I did not see either of them again that night.

There was still misunderstanding, but I saw that there had been a kind of working truce agreed upon. Sheila was pale and Phil rather stern.

During the weeks that followed I asked myself, many times, had I been mistaken in Sheila? As I watched her restlessness day after day I could think of nothing else.

From not wanting to go out at all, she was accepting every invitation where it would be impossible for Phil to accompany her. Tennis, luncheon, afternoon teas and bridge, she went from one to another in constant round like a squirrel in a cage.

Meantime over her eyes was dropped that intangible mist that shut not only me, but everyone from her thoughts, her emotions that I had grown to know as the danger sign of soul in agony and unhappiness.

Every day I told myself that when mortals try to interfere with destiny they make a sorry mess of it. Every day I regretted that I had helped Sheila in her resolution to put her past aside and marry Phil. It seemed to me that I had deliberately planned and executed the unhappiness of those I loved most.

I began to feel that Dr. Thornton was right—old materialism as he was—when he had declared that after the one great debacle in her life Sheila should have married no one.

Yet one afternoon when I saw Sheila in the dark corner of the big hall, shadowed by the heavy staircase, with the wondering but adoring child of the housekeeper in her arms, I again caught a glimpse of that beautiful something which had first appealed to me in her.

With her head against the dark wood, and her pale face in relief, she was clasping that baby to her breast and crooning over it as all mothers have crooned since first Cain was placed in the arms of Eve.

For the moment I could see that all her baser self had slipped from her like a robe and she was happy. For a moment, thinking she was alone, she was giving vent to that longing for motherhood which she had denied. For the moment, whatever it was that was making her life a hell, had been put away.

Then she saw me! Quickly she dropped the baby on the floor with a soft thud. The surprised infant sent up a wall and my housekeeper came running to see what ailed her child.

"I didn't hurt her, Mrs. Hartwell. I wouldn't hurt her for the world," I regretted Sheila contritely. "I just put her down suddenly, that was all."

"She was just surprised, Miss Sheila," said the child's mother, picking up the baby up. "She adores you. You were born to be a mother."

"Is everyone in conspiracy against me, Kay?" asked Sheila with an ugly little laugh.

REMINGTON OF SOUTH DAKOTA OREGON BISHOP

Portland, Or., Sept. 21.—Right Rev. William P. Remington, suffragan bishop of South Dakota, yesterday was elected bishop of the missionary district of eastern Oregon, to succeed Bishop Robert L. Paddock, resigned.

Bishops of the convention elected him at a secret assemblage opened at 9 a. m. at St. Stephen's cathedral, with celebration of the holy communion. He was confirmed for consecration by the house of deputies when it met in a brief executive session at 2:30 p. m.

At the same time Bishop Remington was elected to the Oregon field some one of four nominees was to have been elected missionary bishop of Haiti. It is believed the bishops elected a man for this post, but it was impossible to confirm this belief, particularly since the house of deputies seemed not to have given confirmation to any such election. After executive sessions of both houses have been held this morning it is believed the matter of the Haitian election will be cleared up.

Four Nominated for Post.

Those originally nominated for the bishopric in Haiti were: Archdeacon H. R. Carson, Panama canal zone; Rev. Walter Mitchell, Charleston, S. C.; Rev. William S. Claiborne, Sewanee, Tenn.; and Rev. John Albert Williams, Omaha, Neb. There were persistent rumors yesterday that Archdeacon Carson was elected along with Bishop Remington.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS DISCUSSES MANDATES

Geneva, Sept. 21.—(By Associated Press)—The assembly of the League of Nations today resumed its discussion of the mandates question in an air of general listlessness. The interest of the delegates is absorbed in the special report of Lord Robert Cecil, which declares that disarmament is dependent upon solution of the economic situation, although its claims upon the European countries are not specially mentioned.

WOMAN, 81, WORKS AT CANNERY HERE DAILY

Another Salem woman, past 80 years of age, works daily canning fruit. Mrs. Josephine Taylor, 448 Center street, 81 years old, appears at a local packing plant each morning at 6:30 o'clock and cans fruit until 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Taylor has worked in the local canneries during the past nine years.

Press dispatches from the south, telling of a woman of more than 80 years who yet put up her own fruit brought out the fact that more than one Salem octogenarian is still active.

WELLINGTON KOO FOREIGN MINISTER IN NEW CABINET

Peking, Sept. 21.—(By Associated Press)—The reorganization of the Chinese cabinet was completed today with the promulgation of a presidential mandate naming Wang Chung Hui, formerly acting premier and acting minister of education, as premier, and confirming the hitherto temporary appointment of Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo to the foreign ministry.

Dr. Wang Chung Hui, a lawyer of international repute, who recently revised the Chinese criminal code, was placed at the head of the cabinet by President Li Yuan Heng when Tang Shao-Yi, representative of Sun Yat Sen at Shanghai finally declined the post.

Prior to the ministerial reorganization, the entire cabinet resigned in a body last night to give President Lia free hand. All were reappointed to office with the exceptions of the ministers of finance, interior, justice and education which positions were filled by the following: Lo Wen-Kan, Sun Tan-Lin, Shu Chien and Dr. Tang En-Sho.

DEAN GRESHAM DECLINES TO BE OREGON BISHOP

Portland, Or., Sept. 21.—Dean Gresham of Grace Cathedral, San Francisco, has declined the nomination as Episcopal missionary bishop to eastern Oregon, to which he was nominated by the presiding bishop. A selection for this post is to be made by the general convention of the Episcopal church today. Dean Gresham gave as a reason for declining the nomination his desire to remain in San Francisco.

SECOND FLOTILLA LEAVES ENGLAND

Malta, Sept. 21.—Various units of the British Atlantic fleet are on their way to join the naval forces in the Dardanelles. It is learned also, that a second destroyer flotilla has been ordered from England and that the light cruisers Caledon and Caryfort are due here shortly on their way to Constantinople.

London, Sept. 21.—(By Associated Press.)—Official confirmation was received here today, from Constantinople stating that the French had withdrawn their troops from Chanak and that the Italians were apparently doing the same thing. The British force is remaining alone at that point.

INDICTED SHERIFF CARRIES PRIMARIES

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 21.—Sheriff Thomas Barker of Ferry county, under indictment in the United States district court here on a liquor running conspiracy charge, has been renominated on the democratic ticket by a majority of four votes, according to the official count. Barker received 284 votes to 280 polled by O'Connell, an avowed "dry" candidate who sought the nomination.
