Former Budget Director Says Congressmen 'Run Like Rats' When Veteran Vote Mentioned.

New York, Oct. 14.-Charles G. Dawes, former director general of the national budget, famed for his "hell and Maria" utterances when he was cutting down government expenses at Washington, smoked his briar pipe in the Waldorf-Astoria last night and made characteristic remarks when 300 bankers and business men gathered to do him honor at dinner.

The dinner was tendered Mr. Dawes by the New York city committee of the national budget committee, an organization which fought for the adoption of the national budget bill. John C. Pratt, chairman of the national commithus feeding them, as they are chairman of the national commit-tee, and Job E. Hedges, receiver of the New York street railways, tried to compliment Mr. Dawes on his work, but he told them, between puffs on his pipe to "cut it out."
