$1320 STILL DUE ON MONUMENT

An additional payment of $500 was made today by the Marion County War Mothers on the principal cost of the county soldiers' monument, reducing the amount yet due to $1320, it was announced today by Mrs. John A. Carson. The latest payment includes the receipts to date from the sales conducted by the War Mothers' organization and recent subscriptions.

Word was received this morning from H. J. Blaising, of the Blaising Granite company of Portland, that if the full amount yet due on the principal is paid by January 15 the interest on it will be cancelled as Mr. Blaising's contribution to the fund.

The local organization is eager to take advantage of this offer but at the present time there seems little possibility of securing the subscription unless there are substantial contributions made by others to complete the needed fund of $1320. The organization has conducted frequent sales but the amount realized from them is small in comparison to the amount that must yet be made, officers declare.

EXTENSION OF TIME IN DRAINAGE DISTRICT CASE

Acting on the suggestion of Secretary of State Kozer the county court has made an extension of time as to its decision on the proposed drainage district in southeast Salem.

At a conference between Kozer and County Commissioner Hunt Kozer stated that he would take no further action in the premises until he had conferred with the attorney general and suggested the extension of time. The question involved is as to the action of the board of control in having the governor sign the drainage district petition for the board, rather than having signatures of all the board members, or the board's secretary.

LIONS LISTEN TO SERMON ON LIFE

"The real battle of life is a battle of faith in humanity and when a man loses faith in his fellow man he has lost the fight of life," Rev. Harry Johnson told the members of the Salem Lions club in a noon address today on "Taking Inventory of Ourselves."

"In any kind of a business inventory there must be a standard of value and in taking stock of ourselves the standard is the Christian attitude toward life," the speaker declared, "Our principal assets upon which we may evaluate ourselves, are our relation to our family, our relation to our intimate friends, our relation to those friends and acquaintances who bear good will toward us, and our relation to the whole human race.

"The most important test of living is the attitude toward the rest of the human race. It is the man on the losing side that thinks the world is crooked and the man who has lost his faith in mankind is in bankruptcy of real living."

Ewing McCroskey provided the feature musical numbers of the program and scored a tremendous hit with music played on a steel saw. He was accompanied at the piano by Betty Bedford. Leslie Springer offered two vocal solos.

WARRANT TO SEARCH HELD A NECESSITY

that the civdence tended to show that defendant was drunk in a public place, and in the presence of the officers, that would have justified his arrest for that crime. But the fact of his drunkeness in their presence, without an arrest, would not justify a search, without a warrant, for the instruments of the crime on his person. That is the very thing that the constitution and the law passed in pursuance thereof forbid."

"Neither officer notified the defendant that they were arresting him for drunkenness in a public place. It is said that that is not necessary to establish a lawful arrest for a crime committed in the officer's presence. That is true. But what was said or not said at the time is revelent on the question of whether there was an arrest at all. Neither officer testified in court that he arrested the defendant for being drunk, or had any intention to do so.

"The very best evidence that he was not arrested for the crime of drunkenness in a public place is that he was not afterward charged with the crime. If he was not arrested that he might be held for that crime, he was not arrested. A legal arrest gets its legal significance from the purpose of it—to answer for a crime."

The court also finds that the "arrest for the crime for which the defendant was tried and convicted followed and did not precede the search. The officers searched defendant's person for evidence of a crime, without a warrant, and found it, and then, and not until then, they arrested him for the crime. The search was illegal and the evidence illegally obtained."

The court likewise held that testimony obtained by revelations of the illegal search was not admissable as evidence.

Relating to the return of liquor seized in illegal searches the opinion says:

"Whatever the law may be in other states, it cannot be said that intoxicating liquor cannot be the subject of private legal ownership in this state. It is not, per se, contraband. Its possession is legal, if it was legally obtained before the prohibition act went into effect. Its possession is lawful when a physician gives it to his patient for medicine.
