OLD CON GAME WORKED ON SAFE

A confidence game well known among restaurant men was perpetrated on the cashier of a downtown restaurant this morning, according to a report at the police station.

Two persons are required for this act. They both eat. One then leaves, referring the cashier to the one yet at the table for his check.

"I'm going after cigars," is a good line for this exit, claim the police.

The second person in the team then usually saunters past the cashier with a nonchalant air, only to be called back and asked for pay for both checks.

"Why, I was invited to eat with Jack," is his line. "He must have forgotten. Just a minute, I'll get him."

The cashier holds the sack. Police have a description of the two men who used this plan this morning.

DUCK HUNTING SEASON CLOSED WITH GOOD SPORT

The duck season which closed yesterday was one of the best ever seen in the vicinity of Salem, according to the testimony of local sportsmen. Good shooting began earlier than usual, because of the early rains; the ducks were numerous and in better condition than usual.

Few ducks were shot on the river, the birds for the most part going inland because of the better feeding conditions there. Many sportsmen have constructed artificial ponds, scooping out some low marshy place or damming up some creek. Feed is scattered in the ponds, and live decoys used to draw the ducks. A total of 260 ducks was reported shot on one small pond during the season.

"Ten years ago they used to think they couldn't get any ducks around here," one Salem sportsman said this morning, "but we get all kinds of them now."

Although the season officially started October 15, sportsmen declare that as a rule the shooting usually does not get good until nearly Thanksgiving day. Last year, however, good bags were brought in during the first weeks of the season.

The vicinity of Reklam seems to be a favorite locality for duck hunters, although good shooting is also reported near Turner and other nearby towns. A large number of duck clubs have been formed, which keep the ponds and lakes in an inviting condition for the game.

The cold snap which occurred in December stopped practically all duck hunting. What few birds did not go west to the coast or south to a warmer atmosphere, stayed on the river, where they could be hunted only with boats, and then with difficulty. However, a few duck hunters are reported to have made a success of this method.

Geese, as usual, were scarce, the large "Canadian honker" being practically unobtainable. A few of the smaller kinds were brought in before the season closed.

STATE OFFICE BUILDING BILL

Representative Kilham will introduce a bill providing for the construction of a new state building for office space, to be located on the vacant plot of ground immediately north of the supreme court building. The bill, it is understood, will follow the plan outlined in a recommendation of Secretary of State Kozar as custodian of capitol buildings and grounds. This calls for the provision of the money by an annual tax for a period of three or four years, the amount raised each year to be one third or one fourth of the whole amount; as the case may be, and work not to start on the building until the entire amount is raised. It is estimated that the cost would be $400,000 or $500,000.

Representative Kilham made a careful inspection of the state buildings this week and declares that the present system of renting quarters and squeezing offices into the hall of representatives is both expensive and wasteful.
