SALESMEN SELL STOCK ON PROMISES (Continued from Page One)

Not dictate by whom work on homes upon which they make loans is to be done, and the trio not made the mistake of offering the same proposition to two or more tradesmen in each line, they might even now be working a similar game on the public as agents of the Prudential Savings & Loan association, to which they made application for salesmen's jobs following their discharge by their former employers. Their failure to get permits as salesmen for the Prudential, because clearances of their work as agents of the Western Savings & Loan had not been filed with the corporation department, halted their further operations.

Ross, whose agent's permit was cancelled by the corporation commissioner December 1 upon receipt of evidence that he had made false statements regarding loans agents and had promised loans to people on condition that they buy stock, does not figure as prominently as the other two in the Salem operations.

Diederich and Liberty were sent to Salem early in December for the purpose of establishing a loan board here for the association. This they did, securing Joel Baumgartner as local agent, and arranging for the Salem Bank of Commerce to be used as a depository. With this accomplished, they set out to sell stock in the association, and it is in connection with these sales that the misrepresentations are charged.

The Fleener Electric company, according to the report of the corporation department agent who investigated, was promised all of the electrical work on homes built with money loaned by the association in this territory. The same promise was later made to H. W. Hatch, E. K. Denison and Leo H. Johnson, all engaged in the same line of business.

GAME BOARD SEEKS POWERS OVER SEASON

(Continued from Page One) The routine work of the commission," says the report, "could be expedited should the game commission have an auditor whose duties would be to supervise the purchase of supplies and expenditure of funds; furthermore, should the game commission have a revolving fund of sufficient size to take care of regular monthly expenditures all claims could then be assigned to the commission, and the commission thereby enabled to take advantage of cash discounts in purchasing materials. This system prevails in some departments and should it be made effective in the game department it would greatly expedite its work."

The commission shows a balance in the game protection fund on November 30, 1924, of $35,964.95. Receipts in 1924 were $325,077.57 and disbursements $314,915.53. Receipts in 1924 were $432,149.49 and disbursements $287,184.51.

For trout propagation $117,513.57 was expended in 1923 and $125,367.57 in 1924. Trout distributed to the 36 counties during the two years totaled 68,109,500. Pheasants liberated in the several counties totaled 21,822.

Fines resulting from arrests for violation of game laws in 1923 totaled $22,072.50 and in 1924 $27,262.

Prosecution of the trio is instigated by the corporation department, and is a part of the campaign being waged to rid Oregon of fraudulent "high pressure" salesmen through strict enforcement of the blue sky law, amendment of which to make it more stringent is being sought before this session of the legislature.

WORK OF RAISING RELIEF BEGUN

Work of raising the Relief, Willamette river steamer which was crushed by the ice on December 24 while tied at the dock at Salem was begun today. A barge was placed on each side of the crippled boat this morning, the barge on the inner side having to be dragged partly up on shore. A diver, brought from Portland for the purpose, was sent down under the steamer this afternoon, drawing chains from one barge to the other. The chains will be drawn up, raising the vessel after which a temporary patch will be put into its side. It will be ready to be towed to Portland in about a week, members of the crew working on the ship-stayed this afternoon.

TAKE FAIR BOARD FROM GOVERNOR

Another attack that is to be made on Governor Pierce at this session of the legislature, it developed today, will be an effort to wrest from him the appointment of members of the state fair board and place the appointive power into the hands of the state board of control. A bill to this effect is being prepared.

Friends of the governor profess to have information that back of this is an effort to get A. H. Lea again into the office of secretary of the board and manager of the fair. Only one man on the board, it is said, wants Lea in the office. This is J. E. Reynolds of La Grande, and Pierce's friends claim to know that should the governor lose control of the fair board, Reynolds alone would be retained. It is asserted that Reynolds came to the meeting of the board in Salem last Monday with the intention of nominating Lea for the office, but saw his election would be impossible. The result was that Mrs. Ella Schultz Wilson was elected unanimously.
