

WHAT IS DOING IN LEGISLATIVE SESSION

LA RONDA PIERCE AGAIN IN TROUBLE OVER $50 FINE

Portland, Or., Jan. 23.—La Ronda Pierce, at one time right-hand man of State Probation Commissioner Cleaver and now star witness against Cleaver at a legislative inquiry into Cleaver's official conduct, was arrested by the police after being trailed by an alleged Cleaver agent and jailed on a charge of failing to pay a $50 fine assessed against him in the municipal court last May as a result of his escape with Dolly Quarter, "queen of the bootleggers."

Pierce charges persecution. He was "arrested" by William L. McMills just as he stepped from a room occupied by a group of Oregon sheriffs in Portland for the sheriff's convention at the Imperial hotel. McMills did not attempt to take Pierce to jail, but waited for the arrival of a regular policeman.

Pierce spent some time at police headquarters and finally obtained his release on his promise to arrange matters with the court clerk.

Pierce quarreled with Cleaver and was ousted. Dolly quarreled with her husband and other liquor traffickers. Shortly after midnight one day last May an attorney appeared at headquarters and charged Pierce and the Quarter woman with disorderly conduct and demanded action. Lieutenant Crane and a bevy of policemen went to the woman's east side apartment and found the two. They were arrested.

The two were tried in the municipal court. The woman turned against Pierce. Both were convicted and he was assessed a $50 fine. She was left off with a suspended sentence. Pierce filed notice of appeal, but failed to perfect it and the $50 judgment remained against him on the books of the municipal court.

Pierce was brought to the city jail by Motorcycle Patrolman Ruelnell. He was taken before Lieutenant Crane, who after reading the bench warrant charging Pierce with failing to pay the $50 fine held him until Pierce made arrangements for his release.

STEAMER RELIEF WOODS FOR TRIP

After its temporary overhauling the Relief river steamer which was crushed by the ice during the cold snap a month ago, yesterday afternoon was taken to a spot in the slough where wood could be loaded on the lower deck, preparatory to making the trip to Portland under her own steam. Fires built under her boilers yesterday were allowed to produce a steam pressure of 100 pounds, with no serious injuries becoming evident.

This morning officials in charge of the ship declared that they would be ready to take her to Portland as soon as they received instructions to do so.

The hole was high on the port side, and is approximately a foot above water when the steamer has no cargo. It now has a heavy strip of canvas fastened over it. Otherwise the hull has been found to be in good condition. Above water the entire port side presents a damaged appearance, but those in charge of the work state that it is completely overhauled at the cost of a few thousand dollars.

A crew working on the boat all week has succeeded in removing the heavy coating of river mud that was deposited on the decks while the boat rested on the river bottom.

After the Relief is taken to Portland bids will be asked to completely recondition her. Indications are that in a few weeks she will be in as good condition as ever.

DOG LICENSE LAW FAILURE ASSERTS HUNT

The present system of licensing dogs has been a failure, according to County Judge J. T. Hunt and steps should be taken at the present legislature to remedy the errors of the present law. He states the idea is all right and there should be protection from sheep killing dogs, but the present method is cumbersome, in that it costs more to collect the license fees and pay for the sheep killed than is realized from the fund raised.

"When the license law first went into effect licensees were pretty well paid up, but they have dropped out and last year it was necessary to hire a special man to collect the licenses," stated Judge Hunt. "I am in favor of a license on dogs for the purpose of reimbursing owners of sheep killed by sheep killing canines."

"The change I propose is to transfer the license fee to the county treasury and have the county treasurer issue the licenses."

$72,000 SOUGHT IN NORMAL BILL

Appropriation of $72,000 for maintenance and salaries is asked for the Oregon Normal school at Monmouth in a bill introduced yesterday afternoon by the Polk county delegation in the house. The sum is asked in addition to the regular amount provided under existing laws. The bill has an emergency clause.

Surety bonds instead of certified checks would be acceptable with bids for supplying material to municipalities in this state of Oregon and its subdivisions under house

FAMILY NIGHT AGAIN TONIGHT

So successful was the first of the "Family Nights" held at the Grand theater last Friday evening, Manager J. C. Stille has announced that this will be a regular Friday night feature at the Grand. This week, "The Arizona Romeo," starring Buck Jones, will be the offering for "Family Night" and the admission price will be the same as last Friday night—50 cents for the whole family.

For the midweek programs at the Guthrie theaters "Flirting With Love," a fascinating tale of the girl who mocked cupid, a sparkling story of humor and thrilling dramatic intensity, is showing at the Oregon theater.

The picture stars Colleen Moore and Conway Tearle and is rated among the really clever productions of the season.
