MUSHER BRINGS ANTI-TOXIN TO NOME SAFELY

Nome, Alaska, Feb. 3—(By Associated Press)—Fatigued from two days' loss of sleep and exhausted from driving a team of dogs sixty miles through a blinding blizzard for seven and one half hours in order to deliver 300,000 units of diphtheria anti-toxin to this town yesterday, Gunnar Kasson was still sleeping early today.

Kasson accomplished a feat seldom attained by seasoned mushers of the sub-Arctic. For two days he waited on the trail at Bluff with thirteen dogs headed by Balto, of the Hammon Consolidated gold fields company, to trans fer serum shipped from Anchorage via Nenana from Olsen's relay team. Leonard Zeppalla undefeated musher of the north, met a relay team at Shaktolik, east of Norton Sound, and carried the anti-toxin to Golofnin, on the north shore of Norton Sound, Bering sea, where Olsen awaited him.

Despite a temperature of 28 degrees below zero and a blizzard fanned by a stiff wind, Kasson mushed on. The storm and darkness prevented him from meeting Fred Rohn at Solomon for the last short relay dash into Nome. He kept up the pace, however, and reached here at daybreak. Four dogs in his team were badly frozen.

Rohn arrived before noon from Solomon after he learned Kasson had missed him. No word has been received from Zeppala. The former Finnish athlete is expected to return slowly, resting at villages to feed his tired dogs.

A portion of the serum, frozen on its arrival, was thawed out yesterday afternoon and used on patients. Dr. Curtis Welch said he could not tell if anti-toxin had deteriorated until the effects were checked.

HEALING ARTS REGULATED BY BILL IN HOUSE

Strict qualification of all persons seeking to practice healing arts in Oregon would be required under house bill 391 introduced by McCallister, Marion county, yesterday afternoon. It would put a definite educational requirement on all persons practicing healing arts, excepting dentists, opticians, and Christian Science practitioners.

To qualify one would have to possess a diploma from a four-year high school or the equivalent thereof; to have completed at least two courses of study of eight months each in collegiate work in some standard college or university of at least the grade of the University of Oregon; to have been graduated from an institution prescribing and enforcing a four year course in the healing arts, the curiculum to have included anatomy, physiology, pathology, diagnosis, and obstetrics over a period to and equivalent of the courses prescribed by the board of regents of the University of Oregon.

The measure also provides for the organization of a board of licensure in the healing art to be composed of ten members, eight of whom shall be named by the governor. The ninth member of the board shall be the state superintendent of public instruction and the secretary of the Oregon state board of health shall be the tenth. The unspecified eight shall be selected from the recognized state medical societies.

FISH BILL TO TEST STRENGTH OF GOVERNOR

pulsated in by the sponsors for bill, and is considered to have strengthened its prospects of passage.

Following closely on the heels of the fish bill will be the measure shearing the governor of his appointive power over the game commission. This bill will pass the house this afternoon and go over to the senate. When it came up in the house in regular order on the calendar this morning it was called back into committee for a few minor corrections, and also to allow the house to clear the decks of minor bills on the schedule before tying itself up in the lengthy controversy that is certain to accompany consideration of the game bill.

The bill is in no danger in the house, but there is no question but what the opposition will throw all of its strength into the battle in an effort to block at this time the alleged "hamstringing" program in prospect.

One of the most interesting battles in prospect in the senate is the one brewing over the Mills post-primary convention bill, where organization and other alignments will be cast aside and the question decided on its merits with embarassing policy ties cast into the discard. This will find even the machine in discord and it is an even bet whether or not friends of the bill will be able to muster the 16 votes needed for passage.

Because the measure carries the referendum clause it will not have to face the veto axe in the hands of the governor, who is known to be antagonistic to the idea of meddling with the primary laws.

The last of the bills to trim the governor of his prerogative dropped into the house hopper yesterday afternoon, when Representative Settlemier introduced the companion measure of his proposal to place the administration of the penitentiary in the hands of the board of control. The new bill removes the secretary to the governor from the state parole board, places the appointment of the other members of the board in the hands of the board of control, including the parole officer.

The bill also vests the paroling power in the hands of the board.

REDS SANGUINE OF U. S. RELATIONS

Moscow, Feb. 3.—(By Associated Press)—Soviet is daily becoming more sanguine of American recognition and bolsheviki officials seldom lose an opportunity to tell the people that the United States will be forced to re-establish relations with Russia before the end of the present year.

Addressing a large gathering of Kharkov communists yesterday Christian Rakovsky, soviet charge d' affaires in London, who is on a special speech making tour, said:

"I am audacious enough to prophesy that the United States will recognize us this year, not because I have received information from private sources, but because the prevailing international situation, brought about by the recognition of soviet Russia by France, Japan, Italy and other countries, will compel America to recognize us too.

POLICE NOT TO BE DOG CATCHERS

Bedlam is agog over the unexpected turn in the proceedings of the city council last night on the ordinance providing that police officers be appointed dog catchers, and be clothed with the authority and responsibility of apprehending any dogs found running at large. Instead of one lone man to dodge, canine gossip had it that more than half a dozen policemen, well versed in the ways of sly dogs and vagabonds, and able to read with exactitude the footprints of any transgressor of the law would be hot on the trail of unleashed dogs.

But at the third reading of the ordinance and subsequent vote last night a message of hope was broadcast from kennel to kennel and from alley to alley. The aldermen voted no on the passage of the ordiance. Even the council committee which recommended passage of the ordinance failed to vote for it unanimously. The defeat was decisive, although Alderman W. W. Rossbraugh and one other voted "aye". A grin was discerned on the face of Frank Minto, chief of police, as the negative votes were cast.
