MARK GRAVE OF DAVENPORT AT SILVERTON

Silverton, Or., Feb. 5.—(Special.)—The grave of Homer Calvin Davenport in the Silverton cemetery is now no longer unmarked. A beautiful monument with a reproduction of one of his most famous cartoons on one of its faces now covers the grave.

The carving on the monument was completed last week at the Schanen marble works at Portland and the great stone, weighing approximately six tons, with its base, was taken to Silverton by truck and set up above the tomb of the famous cartoonist.

On one face of the monument is a carved reproduction of "The Journey Across," a cartoon which was drawn by Mr. Davenport at the time of his father's death in 1911. The carving is a beautiful reproduction of the original and was done by G. Pinardi.

On the other face of the monument, is the inscription "Erected by his friends to the memory of Oregon's world-renowned cartoonist, Homer Calvin Davenport, 1867-1912."

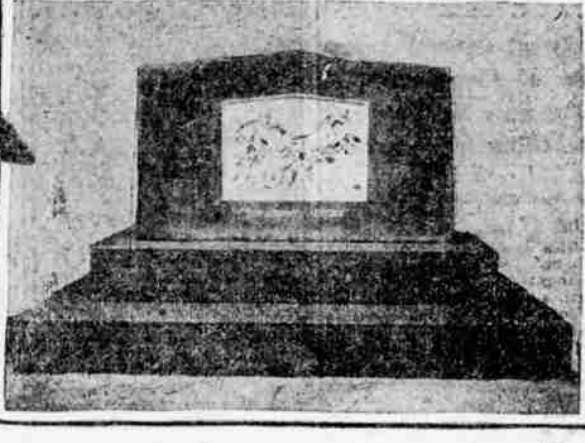

The original of the cartoon, "The Journey Across," was obtained from the Oregon Historical society for the reproduction on the face of the monument. This cartoon is now framed and occupies a place in the display of that society's public auditorium building at Portland. It was given to George H. Himes by the cartoonist at the time of the elder Mr. Davenport's funeral at Silverton, May 4, 1911.

The cartoon, which shows Homer Davenport's father in a chair being taken towards the clouds, was drawn on the train which bore Homer Davenport to Silverton and his father's funeral, so Mr. Himes reports.

Due to the stormy season, no ceremony was held at the placing of the monument but the committee gives out that an unveiling will probably be held at some future date when the weather becomes more settled. Some have suggested that the unveiling be held on Memorial day but others object to this and think it should be held on some day not devoted to other ceremonies as many out-of-town friends may wish to attend.

The $2000 fund for the financing of the monument was raised by a committee which included McKinley Mitchell, Julius Wolf and Dr. C. W. Keene.

BILL MAKES CIVIL ENGINEER HEALTH OFFICER

Persons engaged in sanitarium in Oregon would be permitted to issue death certificates, other official documents, and would be allowed to sign birth certificates if their college training in obstetrics and minor surgery permitted under the provisions of house bill 197 introduced by Hurlburt, Multnomah county.

The bill would completely reorganize the state's system of supervision over the healing arts. It would establish the office of a health commissioner, who would have to be a civil engineer. He would have supervision over all systems of therapeutics and could inspect at any time medical institutions of the state.

The measure is designed as a counter stroke against house bill 391 providing for a sharp raising in the standards of medical practice qualifications in Oregon. It is understood to have the naturopaths for its sponsors. It is likely that a compromise will result between the two divergent groups, whereby some provision will be made for including the naturopaths under probable amendments in house bill 391.

Charles Purcell—who was drowned in the Willamette river at Salem Saturday night had been a resident of the Talbot district for several years. Mr. Purcell with P. L. Turridge, also of Talbot, left Hona Vista in a boat late Saturday afternoon for Salem, expecting to reach there before night, some trouble owing to the high water delayed their arrival until after dark. The men became confused in the darkness and their boat hit an obstruction in the river and capsized throwing both into the water. Mr. Turridge was able to reach some willows where he clung until help arrived. It is thought here that Mr. Purcell's heavy clothing made it impossible for him to reach shore. Mrs. Martha Purcell and Christians Purcell the drowned man's mother and sister live at Talbot.

It is feared that some of the fall sown grain was damaged in this section by the cold snap in December. Fruit trees however seem to have suffered very little with a few exceptions, in many orchards real young trees have been hurt to some extent. Shrubs and roses were nearly all killed on many farms. Everyone is earnestly hoping that it may be another five years or even longer before we experience a return of the zero weather.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Marlatt were in Salem Saturday on business.

The friends of Mrs. William Freeman who is ill at the Deaconess hospital in Salem will be glad to learn that she is fast recovering and will be at home again soon.

FREEZE PROVES DISASTROUS TO GRAVEL ROADS

Dallas, Or., Feb. 5.—The December freeze proved a disastrous one on gravel roads in this county and as a result of the freeze and the heavy rains of the past few weeks many roads are cutting up quite badly, according to County Judge Hawkins. The county is endeavoring to keep heavy traffic off the roads as much as possible until the weather allows them to dry up sufficiently to be put in shape.

The effect of the freeze is apparently the most disastrous to roads ever known in this county, according to Mr. Hawkins. So far it has shown little had effect on paved roads here. The gravel roadbeds, however, were loosened and are rutting quite badly. The continued rain has made it impossible to work them, and at the same time has loosened the rock still more.

In Yamhill county sections of the McMinnville-Sheridan black-top paving has begun to disintegrate and break up. This has also been attributed to the freeze and if something can not be done to remedy it, it is apparent that much of the paving will have to be re-laid in the spring.

The freeze damage to grain which has become so apparent through the entire west side district wherever there was little snow seems to be practically total in some fields and few farmers will have enough of a stand to afford to risk a crop without re-seeding. The freeze was accompanied by the usual freaks of frosts.

Farmers who have lived here 20 years or more state that they never before saw grain freeze out in the high ground and stick in the low ground. But many places where there was grain in low places have a fair stand left, while the higher ground is bare.

POISON PLACED IN CAPSULES BY OHIO STUDENTS

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 5.—(By Associated Press.)—Columbus police today planned to question Ohio university students who last week worked in the pharmacy dispensary from which capsules, some of which contained poison, were used to fill prescriptions written by the university student health service and which caused the death of at least one student and serious illness of several others. With every supply of the poison on the campus accounted for, the task the investigators faced was a three fold one: to discover who gave out the capsules containing the poison instead of ones containing quinine, which closely resembles the poison.

To find out, if possible, the motive, if any, underlying the act, and, to discover the source of supply of the poison.

Belief that the poison was intentionally placed in the capsules was strengthened yesterday by the finding of definite traces of the drug in the stomach of Davis Pusken, Canton, Ohio, senior, who died Sunday.

The only traces of the poison discovered were in a capsule in the possession of Timothy J. McCarthy, and evidence of the poison in the contents of the stomach of George Thompson, McCarthy and Thompson are two of the three students taken most violently ill, and who have survived.

Spare Your Motor As well as your Starter!

Remember, there's more due your motor than gasoline which starts quickly. That's a common quality with good gasolines.

YOUR motor-pistons should receive a powerful thrust, not a sudden crashing blow upon the head. That thrust should come from a sort of series of explosions which deliver power impulses throughout the entire length of each piston's stroke.

A swift, vibrationless acceleration,—gliding, rushing speed—and minimized "knocking" on hills and through heavy pulls are the results.

To use this fuel is to insure your motor's best performance.
