A brief, comprehensive summary of the work of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been prepared by the national organization and is embodied in a recent letter received by the Daughters, Mrs. R. S. Stearns of Portland. It reads, in part, as follows:

"Though made up of the descendants of a great war, as is many another patriotic organization, the Daughters of the American Revolution are so far removed from its actual participants of war (its most cases from three to five generations) that personal or material benefit to their members is entirely negligible. Service for home and country is the ideal which actuates them in their activities.

"Daughters of the American Revolution strive as best they can to help maintain the laws of our land and the sacred institutions of our government.

"Do you realize that they are classed as an educational organization by the United States government and that all of the activities of the Daughters of the American Revolution come under that head? Washington's injunction to the American people in his farewell address might well serve as an expression of their objective, for they 'promote, as a matter of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge in order that they may cherish, maintain and defend the institutions of our government.'

"They are teaching the proper love and respect for the flag, and are endeavoring to show our citizens that any use of it other than that for which it was divinely intended is to demean its great past and imperil its glorious future.

"That our nation shall not lose sight of its ideals of loyalty and patriotism, Daughters of the American Revolution are stressing the proper observance of those great days, such as Flag day and the Fourth of July, which mark the outstanding events in our national history.

"As a historic society, it is marking and restoring historic trails, sites and houses. Thus does it preserve to all time the rapidly vanishing landmarks of our past. Its museum in Memorial Continental hall houses the almost sacred relics of the revolution, while its library, besides gathering historical volumes, collects family records that go back to the continental army.

"Their educational work begins with the alien at the port of entry. Through our two paid social workers established there in the detention rooms, in cooperation with government authorities, the immigrants are met in a friendly way at Ellis Island. The immigrant is given a useful manual that tells him, in his own language, what are his rights and his privileges, where he may go to find work and how to become naturalized. It also includes a brief history of the United States. Though these manuals have been steadily distributed for years, the big steamship lines have only recently realized the great value of them and are now requesting

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of saving a sorrow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dark eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.
