FOG AT BEND CAUSES MISHAPS

Bend, Or., Feb. 13.—A heavy fog which hung over the town last night was responsible for a series of accidents at the Newport bridge across the Deschutes river within the city limits. District Attorney A. J. Moore managed to save himself from going over the side of the bridge when he came suddenly upon a crowd around the car of Lloyd Magill which had just turned completely around and finally stopping cross wise of the road at the approach to the bridge. Icy pavements together with the fog was responsible for the first accident and because of the icy pavement Moore was unable to stop his car. He applied the brakes and took a chance on the railing of the bridge keeping him from going into the water, 12 feet below.

Fifteen feet of railing was torn off by the Moore car which finally came to a halt with two wheels hanging over the side of the bridge. No one was injured.

HOUSE VOTES EXTENSION OF BOND SALES

is a question as to whether the highway commission can refund and issue new bonds," he declared. "However, there is no danger if the law permitted such procedure. The legislature meets again in two years, and any abuse could be stopped. The bill is in the interest of state development."

Representative Shelton, Baker, pointed out that the highway commission had not sold a bond during 1924 and that there was no danger of it abusing its authority. He pointed out that there was need of having an emergency issue authorization on hand. "What would happen if the gas tax were fought and found unconstitutional?" he asked.

Hamilton, of Bend, fought for the bill. "We can't stop highway building now," he declared. "In eastern Oregon and in certain coast counties work is hardly started. Because the Willamette valley is paved, there is no reason to stop and forget eastern Oregon and other sections."

Representative Carkin opposed the bill, he explained, on account of the policy it carried. "It's a question of whether or not we shall give free reign to the highway commission," he averred. I have every confidence in the high way commission, but it is like individuals in that it is likely to become enthused in its work to too great an extent. If the bill is passed, the commission can reissue as rapidly as refunding is provided. There is a move on to bring up our valuation of property which would make available greater income for the commission than now exists.

SALEM, MASS. CHALLENGES SALEM, ORE.

Hug this morning.

"I think it will be one of the best things Salem high school has ever done," was the statement made by J. C. Nelson, principal of the high school. "The only thing that may stand in our way is the matter of financing the proposition." He has already interviewed railroad authorities regarding the expenses of the trip, he indicated.

The debate at Salem will probably be held in the armory, he said, and admission will be charged to defray expenses of the trip. Possibility was seen that the chamber of commerce might help the project in a financial way.

The debate in Salem next May will probably be on the general question of child labor measures by the federal government. The people of Massachusetts recently defeated the child labor amendment by an overwhelming vote, and the eastern team wishes to uphold the action of the people there. Indications are that the debating authorities at the local high school will not agree to so specific a statement of the question, since the eastern school would have the advantage of closer access to the material in such a case. It is probable, however, that the Salem team will favor in a general way federal regulation of child labor.

It has not been definitely arranged how many debaters will be on each team, but the number will be either two or three. Salem debaters will probably be selected from among Homer Richards, Thomas Childs, Avery Thompson and Margaret Pro, who now compose the two Salem teams of two members each.

FATE OF PROHI DEPARTMENT UP TO PIERCE

is to be expected that if the governor does not correct the evil they have made clear to him they will take steps to do so, or join forces with others aiming to that end.

Transfer Suggested

While it is generally anticipated that a bill transferring the prohibition department to the board of control will be proposed, the germ of another idea has already taken root. This is to have the legislature itself commission a prohibition director, give him broad authority, and make him responsible to the legislature for the conduct of the department. This, however, presents the always objectionable feature of having the legislature dabble in the administrative side of governmental affairs, but there are those who favor the plan as a temporary arrangement to be endured until there has been a change in the office of governor.

There is this certainty about the situation: if the governor refuses to fire Cleaver a bill to transfer the department out of the governor's hands will go sailing thru the house, notwithstanding the veto, and there is no certainty that the friends of the executive, minus such supporters as Eddy, Garland, Johnson and Hare, would be able to sustain a veto in the upper house.

Abolishment Not Likely

Abolishment of the department can be reasonably said to be out of the question. Such a proposal would certainly die in the senate, if not in the house.

Likewise the bill introduced in the senate yesterday to increase the fund of the state department from $25,000 a year to $50,000, does not evidence any glowing prospects of enactment. Its two companion measures—they were all three introduced by the alcoholic traffic committee, although it is understood that none of the members are to be bound to them—will likely be fought out solely on their merits. One writes into the state boss dry law the Volstead provision as to the use and possession of wine for sacramental purposes, and the other specifies that the agents of the prohibition department shall be named by the commissioner rather than the governor, and specifies that the department shall cooperate with local officials.

All Up To Governor

There is no indication as yet as to what reception will greet the recommendation made by Senator Hare and four members of the house committee that a flying squadron be substituted for the prohibition department, and that the local officers be given a larger share of the enforcement fund. Should the governor retain Cleaver and control over the proposed "flying squadron" be vested in him, then the Hare plan would be doomed to practically certain defeat, for fear that Cleaver would be appointed to head the new corps. With Cleaver out of the way this suggestion might get by both houses.

And, in the last analysis, the department may retain its same status for another two years at least. The probers have pointed out the way. If the governor removes Cleaver it is probable that the department will remain as it is with but a few minor changes in the law.
