HARE BLAMES GOVERNOR FOR CLEAVER'S ACTS

"How in the name of Governor Pierce can you say Cleaver ran that office as he wanted him to, and then fire him, is more than I can see. If there ever was a servant faithful to his master, that man was Cleaver," was the statement made by Senator Hare, member of the committee investigating the record of State Probation Commissioner Cleaver, whose resignation was accepted this morning by Governor Hare. Senator Hare spoke before a full house at the chamber of commerce luncheon this noon.

That Cleaver's record was full of blunders and inefficiency, but that the real responsibility was to be placed on the shoulders of the governor of the state, under whose direction he was required to work, was the gist of Mr. Hare's address.

"If ever a man assumed a public office bound and fettered, that man was Cleaver," he said.

Among other speakers pointed out the bringing of special operators to the state to "get" the big rum runners believed to be operating within the state limits. Upwards of ten thousand dollars were expended in bringing Abraham Wineburg, his wife, and Victor Hugo, his assistant, to Oregon. $5,000 of this money was raised from secret sources in Portland, he stated, but large parts of it came from various parts of the state, $1500 being a direct appropriation from state funds. The sum of $2300 came from Klatsop county, he stated.

Instead of arresting big rum runners, Senator Hare stated, the big boys and his forces made 20 little arrests. The men were acquitted in three of the cases; the other 27 cases were dismissed.

Cleaver was forced to work largely under the direction of Hare, head of the Anti-Saloon league, Hare charged. He being vouchered for by Hare, as being absolutely trustworthy, he said.

"Yet so far as we know that money was wasted, squandered and lost—and worse," he stated, referring to the sums expended by Wineburg and his assistant. "We have no satisfactory report as to where that money went. And the statute of limitations will run before we get those men back to answer to our charge."

Hare read a report of Wineburg, in which the statement was made that money had been spent by Hugo for immoral purposes on one "investigating" expedition.

"The conclusion which his investigating committee reached were summed up by Senator Hare. They included the belief that the record of Mr. Cleaver in office had not been satisfactory, that men had been used who were not fit to hold the offices they were given, that the office had been used in defiance of the law, that the commission had been appointed, all that it was found necessary to do to get a job done was to 'pat the governor on the back,' and that large sums of the people's money had been wasted."

"And I'll tell you one thing," he stated, "Mr. Cleaver's successor will be given power to hire and fire the men for whom he is responsible."

Cleaver was present at the lunch.

COMMUNITY CHEST SOUGHT TO CUT DRIVES

The numerous financial campaigns, occurring in Salem with apparently increasing frequency during the past few years, have brought the situation to a point where some change—a community chest or a community chest somewhat similar to that in Portland—must be effected, according to the word of a number of Salem business men this morning.

"It's got to a point where we can't spare the time," said Tero Hicks, in charge of the present Red Cross roll call in Salem, which was to have been completed last week, but which has been delayed because of inability to secure workers. "We've absolutely got to devise some means for having fewer drives," he continued.

"You take in the last year; there are some men in this town have given close to 10 per cent of their time to one drive or another."

The stand taken by Hicks is backed up by other business men of the city.

"There are certainly too many separate campaigns for raising funds," says E. T. Barnes, who has charge of the Red Cross roll call for Polk and Marion counties.

Dr. Henry Morris, prominent in most of the financial campaigns that have been carried on in Salem during the past few years has stated, "It has its drawbacks in that a man may not give as much to a combination of things as he would to the same things individually. I've always been against the proposition for that reason, but it's now got to a point where we will absolutely have to do something of that kind."

It has been estimated by those in a position to know the facts that in the very recent year over a billion dollars have been raised in Salem for one cause or another. Funds have been secured for the Episcopal, Unitarian, Presbyterian and Christian Science churches, St. Joseph's hall, the Salem city hospital, an annex to the Salem Deaconess hospital, Willamette university, the Methodist old people's home, the Methodist First Baptist church, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A. and a number of other causes. Nobody was hit by all the campaigns, but many were hit by a large number of them. While a community chest would not solve the problem by any means, because many things could not be included in it, the feeling among those who take part in the drives is apparently general that something of the kind is now one campaign as an excuse for not subscribing to another, it is stated by those experienced in soliciting. When one campaign is staged in Salem, there will be some who state they cannot subscribe who state they are saving to subscribe to the next drive. Yet when the next drive arrives they state they have given all they can really spare to the last one. A combination of all campaigns would do away largely with this drawback, it is stated.

Reports from these familiar with the Portland community chest indicate that in that city some subscribers pick out one or two things that have been included in the budget and state that they object to having their money go to that cause. This reason for not subscribing can be eliminated by permitting subscribers to specify where their money is to go, it is said.

The Salem Kiwanis club is scheduled to take up the idea of a Salem community chest at its first closed meeting, which occurs on March 3. Demands from other quarters is expected to bring the matter to a head in the near future.

CAVE VICTIM FOUND DEAD BY RESCUERS

Homer Collins, brother of the entombed man was at the mouth of the shaft part of the day. Guards stood about the mouth of the shaft with bayonets fixed on the surface. An official statement was promised within a few minutes.

It was reported by a workman that the roof of the cavern over Collins was girted, causing them to reach him several hours before they had expected.

No estimates were given as to how soon Collins could be extricated from the natural rock cave which trapped him January 30.

When miners crawled through into the passage leading to Collins, H. T. Carmichael, rescue director, went down the shaft into the cave, where he said he saw Collins lying apparently dead. He returned to the surface and announced the end of his struggle.

Homer Collins, who had made heroic efforts to save his brother Floyd, bore up well when Dr. Funkhouser made the first announcement.

"I have never really hoped to see Floyd alive after the first slide in Sand cave," Homer said to newspapermen.

At 2:45 p. m. no official report had been made, however, saying Collins was dead.

At 3 o'clock Captain C. E. Francis of Bowling Green, medical officer of the 149th infantry, Kentucky nation, volunteered to go into the shaft and was given permission by General Denhardt.

Major M. M. Moss, also of Bowling Green and a medical officer of the same regiment, and Dr. C. C. Howard, Glasgow, representing the Collins family, and Dr. W. H. Hazlett of Chicago stood at the mouth of the shaft while Dr. Francis was making the examination.

"At 1:30 o'clock," said an official bulletin, "the lateral heading at a distance of 12 1/2 feet from the shaft and measured originally through into the circular cave just below the closed door. This was found completely closed."

At 2:35 p. m. Captain Francis came to the surface and reported that when he arrived at the heading he found it was impossible for anyone but a small man to reach Collins.

Ed Brenner went to Collins' body, felt the pulse, made other examinations under Captain Francis' supervision and reported there was no sign of respiration and Captain Francis reported these facts to the officials waiting at the top of the shaft.

The physicians estimated that Collins had been dead for more than 24 hours. In ability to make personal examination would not permit a more definite statement.

No sounds came from Collins at all, no respiration, no movement and the eyes were sunken, indicating, according to the physicians, extreme exhaustion going with starvation.

Dr. William Hazlett of Chicago and Captain Francis held a consultation and reported that the information obtained by Brenner was that Collins' condition would be due to exhaustion and exposure and then went to the heading approximately six feet from the body. Brenner continued tests to determine whether Collins was dead.

The head and right wrist were the only parts of the body apparently covered by loose dirt and rocks. It was impossible for Brenner to touch any part of the body beyond the head and front of the chest.

The electric light bulb, not burning, was found in front of the passage and area surrounding the body were dripping with moisture.

There were no marks or wounds on or about the head Dr. Hazlett said.

Physicians after thorough examination announced that Collins had been dead more than 24 hours. Floyd Collins was trapped in Sand cave at 10 o'clock Friday morning, January 30, by the fall of a boulder on his foot. He was exploring the front part of an old cavern, the tunnel part of which had collapsed years ago, forming the ravine which leads up to the limestone ledge in which the mouth of Sand cave is located.

Some time Wednesday night, February 4, he was fed the last time. Early the next day a rescue party heard his cries from behind the cave in for the last time.

His plight remained undiscovered.

ered for 24 hours, when on January 31, Jewell Eston, a young neighbor boy, penetrated Sand cave far enough to hear his cries for help.

Neighbors and his brothers at once began the effort to dig him out and release the rock and dirt which pinned his legs. All such efforts were unsuccessful and outside helpers, who had cleared away the dirt as far as his knees, were blocked by repeated cave-ins. Finally state officials ordered stopped the rescue efforts down the natural tunnel as too dangerous, and the shaft rescue plan was started Feb. 6. In spite of the hardships of lack of proper tools and materials for such mining operation, the work progressed unceasingly until the odor of banana oil, sprayed into Collins cave Sunday night, became unmistakable Tuesday night in the shaft, through a shaft layer in the bottom of the shaft just below the 40 foot level.

The natural tunnel down which Collins had crawled in search of a new cavern was about 125 feet from the surface to the spot where Collins lay. The rescue shaft, started a few feet in front of the natural mouth of the cave in a limestone ledge, was aimed as a perpendicular tube, the short end line to reach him in the bottom of the tortuous natural tunnel.

UPHAM DEAD AT PALM BEACH HOME

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 16.—Frederick W. Upham of Chicago, who directed the financial disintegration of the republican party for two decades, died at his Palm Beach winter home Sunday afternoon following a cerebral stroke suffered four days previous. He was 64 years old.

Funeral services will be held in Chicago probably on Friday, but the burial, it was reported, would be in Racine, Wis., Mr. Upham's boyhood home.

Mr. Upham, in addition to his political activities, was one of Chicago's leading industrialists, came here in November, hoping to recover his health, which had been failing for several years. Stricken last Wednesday, he rallied slightly until Saturday night when a relapse came.

At Mr. Upham's side when he died were his wife, Mrs. Helen Upham and his brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Overhauser of Ripon, Wis. Mrs. Upham, accompanied by Chicago friends will leave here Tuesday with the body, according to present plans.

SOLONS PLANS DEMORALIZED BY GOVERNOR

ly said that Oregon will continue to be afflicted with a prohibition enforcement department, and with a former district attorney at its head there is even a possibility that the movement to give the department more money will succeed.

The governor appointed another man for the position when he announced the re-appointment to the state name commission of J. N. Fleischer, whose term expires February 25. If there ever was any doubt that the governor would be able to maintain enough strength in the senate to sustain his veto of the bill taking the game commission out of his hands, that doubt has been dispelled by his action this morning.

The governor said that the chief executive had been installed in machinery cast into the legislative in his special message to the two houses, in which he charged them with responsibility for meeting the financial needs of the state for the coming biennium, and served notice upon them that they must dig up sufficient revenue for all needs without further burdening the farmer and the home owner, or leave their proposals to feel the edge of the veto axe.

While it is not considered likely by those who are concerned with the financial needs of the state that the bill will be seriously considered by the legislature, his ultimatum gives them food for deep thought, and it is to be expected that it will take them more than a week to devise a means of meeting the state's needs for the next two years that will be acceptable to the governor, or admit to his shoulder the responsibility of killing them.
