One of the queerest marital tangles ever heard was aired in a Chicago divorce court before Judge Sabath. James Grippando and his wife were separated and Grippando wished to marry Helen Frederick. Grippando was sentenced to 20 days and Helen Frederick to 10 days in jail for contempt of court.

Annual spring vacation at Willamette university begins this afternoon. The college of liberal arts closes at one o'clock. The law school will close at 2 p. m. Most of the students who live close enough to go home for the vacation will do so. Many of the others have announced their intentions to leave the city, going to Portland or elsewhere, and it is expected that the campus will be practically deserted during the week of vacation. A special train is being run by the Southern Pacific railway for the benefit of departing students. The train will leave early in the afternoon, starting on the track on Perry street, near South Winter. Classes will be resumed Monday, March 30th.

Arrangements were completed once before with representatives student body treasurer. On the contrary, obligations have already been entered into to spend more money than is now available. Even at present a campaign is under way to raise more money to finance the annual Clarion Report made yesterday by Mr. Davis, member of the faculty who has charge of student body finances, showed that of $2,997.21 on hand, actual provision has been made to expend $4129, besides adding and ends that are sure to turn up as a part of the regular routine of running a large student body organization.

"We are already obligated to this extent," said Mr. Davis. "For practically all of it contracts have even been signed, so we couldn't back out if we wanted to."

The students, assisted by interested townsmen, have made a tentative list of possible sources of money. On paper, the total reaches the goal of $1700 which a careful estimate has shown will finance the trip, provided strict economy is used at every point. Sources of revenue are as follows:

From student body organizations, $250.

From the sale of tags on the streets of Salem, $100. Girls of the school have volunteered to sell tags all day next Saturday, and a large number are being printed. They will be sold at ten cents each.

From individual subscribers outside the service clubs of the city, $200. Some have already volunteered to subscribe sums ranging from ten to fifty dollars each.

From members of the three service clubs of the city, $700.

If everything goes as planned, the total will reach the necessary $1700.

The boys plan to start on the trip—if they do start—late next week. The tournament at Chicago begins March 21.

FURY OF TORNADO GRAPHICALLY TOLD BY GRAHAM VICTIM

either. I saw whole sides of houses rolling along near the ground.

"It seemed to me that I must reach my two children who were in school and I opened the door again, bent my head down against the wind and started out. Then the storm hit me. I was blown back into the restaurant and against the stove. The whole building seemed to shiver. It rocked back and forth. There was creaking and creaking and then it began to fall. Fire flashed in great puffs from the stove.

"I tried to get away from it. I was afraid I would be burned to death. But the wind blew me back against it. Then the walls fell in. The roof fell. Something hit me on the head.

"How long I was unconscious I don't know. When I came to I was buried under boards and timbers. Near me was a red cow which seemed to be holding some of the weight off me.

"Then came Joe Moschenroos, the butcher, looking for his sister. He saw me, lifted some of the heavy boards, helped the cow and pulled me out. I got up and looked around. There on the floor, white in death, was Lulu, with a great gash in her head.

"I started for the school. I found my own rain coat down the street hanging on a twisted pile of planking. I was wearing it before the storm struck. I put my hand in the pocket. There was my husband's pay check—safe.

"There was a great crowd—boat school children were screaming and crying. Mothers and fathers were weeping silently. But everybody was trying to dig out their own children. I found mine. They were both hurt but thank God they were alive."

Combination Admitted. Owen J. Roberts of government counsel questioned Dr. Bain at length on his conversation with Albert R. Fall, former secretary of the interior, regarding the leasing of the naval oil reserves.

Questioned as to whether he knew the Sinclair crude oil purchasing company was interested with the Standard Oil company of Indiana in the Salt Creek field, adjacent to the Teapot Dome, Dr. Bain said he knew of the combination but that this did not make Harry F. Sinclair a partner in the Salt Creek monopoly because the crude oil purchasing company was not buying crude oil from the Salt Creek field.

school girls, and it is estimated that $100 can be raised by this means.

The junior class of the high school yesterday took action depriving themselves of the junior-senior masquerade, an annual event looked forward to with keen anticipation by both juniors and seniors. The masquerade has been "indefinitely postponed," which to say it has been abandoned, and the $20 which the juniors had counted on spending for the affair has been pledged to the team's fund. This brings the amount contributed by high school organizations up to $250. Some of the high school students were out raising money among townsmen this morning.

One individual, William Bell, raised $250 among Salemites yesterday afternoon. A committee headed by Harry Levy, working among the Salem Kiwanis club, has raised an amount estimated at $400, although early this afternoon the canvases had not been completed and no definite computation of the amount raised had been made.

Some 150 tickets for the high school dance, not reported yesterday and today, bringing the total number up to 650, most of which will probably be actually sold. The price charged is 55c per ticket. The dance will be given next Thursday night.

High school authorities have made a thorough examination of student body finances to see if some place cannot be detected where a pruned in estimates can be made, putting the amount saved into the fund for the eastern trip.

The most painstaking search, however, fails to bring out any possibility of taking money from the railroad conductor. "I was driving my automobile near the Illinois Central tracks about one mile north of DeSoto when the tornado came," he said. "I saw a freight train coming and then I noticed it was getting dark and saw the tornado coming. Then I saw trees and other objects start flying. I saw the DeSoto station lifted up into the air, carried across the street and smashed to pieces on the other side. When it was over, I looked around and could only see one man. He was Frank Hewitt, former station agent, and he was standing all alone out in an open space gazing up in the air in astonishment with parts of trees, posts and telephone poles and parts of houses fell all about him. He was not hurt. Then I looked toward the tracks again and here came a freight train. The track was buried in parts of buildings and other debris and I ran over and flagged the freight."
