W. W. Caveaux, United States surveyor general for Oregon, has approved an application of the state land board for title to 23,000 acres of land in the bed of Warner lake in Lake county, according to information received today by Attorney General Van Winkle. If the recommendation of the surveyor general is affirmed by the commissioner of the general land office, of which there is believed to be no doubt, title to the land will pass from the government to the state. The land has been valued at $10 an acre and is said to be fertile and particularly adapted to hay growing. If the state gets title the land will probably be put on sale, according to G. G. Brown, clerk of the state land board.

PACIFIC MAIL TO MAKE BID LEGAL

Washington, March 27.—The shipping board was told today at hearings on bids for five post-dest-type vessels now in the Pacific trade that the Pacific Mail Steamship company was willing to modify its offer to make it conform with any legal requirements.

Former Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon, counsel for the Pacific Mail, took up legal phases of the pending bid, one for $5,750,000 to be paid part in cash and part in preferred stock of a new corporation to be formed, in behalf of the Pacific Mail, and the other a cash offer of $5,625,000 by R. Stanley Dollar and associates.

Recently the board was informed by its general counsel, Chamberlain G. Parker that the Pacific Mail offer could not be legally considered because of the stock phase.

While contending that the Pacific Mail's offer was legal, Mr. Chamberlain said that if it should be concluded otherwise the company was willing to adapt its bids to meet requirements.

MAN'S DEATH LAID TO BOOTLEGGERS WHO STOLE PONY

Klamath Falls, Or., March 27.—That Freddie Jackson met his death when he apprehended a trio of alleged bootleggers who had stolen his pony at a Saturday night dance in Chiloquin, is the theory on which county officials are prosecuting their inquiry into the Indian youth's death following his wild ride through Chiloquin on the afternoon of March 15.

As a result of the circumstantial evidence which has already been collected the body will be exhumed tomorrow afternoon and a post-mortem examination made, it was announced today by Acting Coroner Towey.

Investigation at Chiloquin today revealed that Jackson's pony was stolen the night before his death while he was attending a dance there.

Louis Knight, who escaped jail here Monday following his arrest for bootlegging, is alleged to have been seen riding the stolen pony, early Sunday.

Jackson went out into the woods searching for the three missing ponies. He was last seen going in the direction of a moon-shine cache which letter was identified as belonging to Louis Knight, Silas Barclay and Millard Lang. Lang is now held in Portland on a federal liquor charge, while Barclay escaped from the county jail here with Knight. An Indian friend of Jackson found a note pinned to a tree near where Jackson is believed to have started his ill-fated ride. Examination of his bridle also is said to have shown it was nearly cut in two.

White residents of Chiloquin who saw Jackson's wild ride and subsequent fall, declared today that Jackson was not unconscious.

oe Polley pleaded not guilty in justice court today to a charge of unlawful possession of a still and was placed under bonds of $500 which he was unable to furnish. He is in the county jail. Date for the hearing has not been set.

That was Salem's reply to compliance with its oft repeated demand for a better class of theatrical productions here. It carries a world of information to the theater management concerning the sincerity of the women's organizations, self-styled reformers and others who have been clamoring for worth-while attractions.

Last night when the curtain rose to reveal more than 600 empty seats before them there was no chaffing, no let-down and no cutting. There was a seat and a swing to the opening numbers that carried the spectators (the use of the plural comes near being a critic's license) back to the romantic shores of Normandy, and it was maintained through lyric and song to a finale that was inspiring in its melody and heartiness.

There was no crush about the doors as the exit began. One walked but without scarce jostling a shoulder. But if Ed Andrews, Jaene Pennington, Harry Pfeil, Jeanne Rose, Carl Bundschuh, Geo. "Ole" Ocken or any other of the principals in the cast were lingering about the foyer they got an earful of compliments that partly repaid them for talent wasted on empty seats. Their work was admirable and fully appreciated, if not generously rewarded.

In this predicament they share honors with "The Cat and the Canary," numbered among the best mystery dramas of recent years and which played to a two-thirds house here only a week or so past; also with Otis Skinner, one of the greatest artists on the English speaking stage who recently played here to little more than half a house.

The Brandoms, Otis Skinner and "The Cat and the Canary," all drew capacity crowds when they appeared in such cities as Medford, Eugene and other places of from 6000 to 16,000 population.

Salem lays claim to an urban population of more than 22,000 people, and a trading area population in excess of 50,000.

Tonight the Brandoms will stage "Robin Hood," America's best loved comic opera, and tomorrow evening "The Chocolate Soldier," no matter what the attendance may be—that is the kind of artists and sports they are.

they will, of course, be out of pocket. But they will not alone be the losers. For two years now the management of the Grand theater has striven to bring the best of theatrical attractions to Salem. The response has been discouraging and expensive. The theater is just about through experimenting and the answer lies with the public. If it wants good, high class productions it will get them, but to get them it must help pay the bill.

Motor trips to Portland to witness simultaneous presentation here reveal a type of civic pride and consciousness that will do little to improve the tone and character of Salem's stage and screen attractions.
