They were brother officers. But one had been a former sweetheart of the other's wife. Thrown together by fate at an isolated army post, it suddenly fell to the former sweetheart to guard the honor of his friend's wife when chance brought a new and unscrupulous lover into her life. The drama developed with appalling swiftness—and as always happens when a wife forgets her honor and her reputation—it could only end in tragedy. No girl can read this gripping story and not find a powerful lesson and warning in it. It appears under the title: "The Double Price," with many other absorbing features in True Story Magazine for May. Don't miss it.

Men differ in their coffee-tastes as they do in size and stature. And they make no bones about it. Some men like a strong, he-man cup of coffee. Others say, "Medium for me." Others still must have it mild. But—
Every man is strong for flavor!

And that's the strong, enduring feature of M.J.B. Drink it to your individual liking—heavy, mild or in-between—the same rich, full-bodied flavor is always in the cup.

There is nothing tame or weak-kneed about the flavor of M.J.B. We see to that! But the exact degree of flavor, the exact strength per cup, is up to you—to your individual coffee-taste.

Vacuum packed by a special process invented and owned by M.J.B. This keeps the coffee full-strength and flavor-fresh always.
