AMERICAN HOME BREAKING DOWN SAYS VAN NUYS

Declaring that there will be over 10,000 children enrolled in church schools in Oregon next year, Walter Van Nuy of Portland stated "The American parents are becoming conscious of the fact that the moral character of their children is breaking down."

Mr. Van Nuy spoke at the Willamette valley Presbytery at Mill City yesterday afternoon. He made reference to a number of bills introduced in the state legislature at its last session, concluding that "the American people are becoming conscious that the home is breaking down."

He cited one grade school in an apartment house district in Portland where he claimed that out of a total enrollment of 725 pupils, 571 are at the present time taking some sort of religious education on the outside. Of the number 192 never attend Sunday school, according to the speaker. Van Nuy is synodical representative of Christian education for the Presbyterian church.

An address was also given by D. A. Thompson of Portland, representative of the national board of missions. His subject was "Requirements of a Successful Minister."

Ward Willis Long, of Salem, pastor of the First Presbyterian church here and D. V. Poling, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Albany, were elected as delegates to the national Presbyterian assembly at Columbus, Ohio, beginning on May 23. The assembly will continue for about 10 days.

Emil S. Winterberger, pastor of the Fairmount Presbyterian church at Eugene was elected moderator for the coming year. Elders were E. J. Morris of Eugene and Jacob Vorhees of Woodburn. C. Stanley Knott of Mill City, pastor of the Presbyterian church there, is the retiring moderator.

STORM HITS HARD EAST OF MOUNTAINS

who stated that telegraphic and train service was uninterrupted.

Rainfall Heavy.—Bend, Or., April 16.—A heavy wind which accompanied the rain at LaPine, 25 miles south of Bend, did considerable damage to telephone lines, according to reports from LaPine this morning and from the local telephone office.

The damage was repaired late yesterday by the telephone company.

The rainfall between Bend and Madras was unusually heavy yesterday and last night, according to reports brought in today. Water is lying on the ground all around Prineville and general rejoicing among the farmers is reported by Bend people returning from there this morning.

Crescent, beyond LaPine and to the south of Bend reported heavy rains both yesterday and last night but little or no wind.

Fishermen returning from Twin Lakes reported heavy rains in the mountains but no wind.

La Grande Escapes.—La Grande, Or., April 16.—La Grande escaped a disastrous wind storm yesterday owing to the fact that it lies protected by hills, according to persons who declared they saw two storms, one sweeping from north to south and the other east to west, meet high above the city with terrific force.

The strong wind toppled over several children at the Central grammar school. One boy was blown against the building and was slightly bruised. No one was seriously hurt. Trees were blown down in the hills. The storm was accompanied by a roar peculiar to storms in the mid-west, one resident asserted. He declared his first instinct was to hunt a cellar.

Klamath Falls, Or., April 16.—Klamath Falls this afternoon was in the throes of a severe sandstorm. The south wind attained a high velocity shortly before the noon hour and swept before it an ever-spreading cloud of fine sand which fell upon the streets here.

Jensen and Mrs. Donna Jensen of Audubon, Iowa, and Mrs. Earl Langley of Portland, John and Loue Kusel of Audubon, Iowa, Herman Kusel of Des Moines, Iowa, and Vernon Kusel of Salem. Mr. Kusel was employed by the street department of the city. Funeral services will be held Friday, April 17, at 1:30 p. m. from Riddon's mortuary. Interment in City View cemetery.

Woods Proud of Only Goat Farm Near Here; Reporter Sees Herd

That he owns the only goat farm in the vicinity of Salem is the claim advanced by E. E. Woods, owner of 24 goats which he keeps on a small hillside tract of land overlooking West Salem. A reporter, dropping in at his farm, found Woods limping leisurely through his yard, beset by young goats that swarmed about him as agreeably and as familiarly as any dogs.

Mr. Woods was enjoying the scenery from his hillside. "Too bad it ain't a clear day," he said, glancing off toward the east. On a clear day you can see Mt. Jefferson right off between the Methodist church spire and the capitol dome. Mt. Hood's right there behind that big fir tree. Looks like it's right over by Woodburn on a clear day." While Woods was enjoying the scenery, the kids were enjoying Woods.

Goats Are Educated.—"Come in and watch me milk once, won't you?" he invited, turning back toward the narrow building that serves as a goat barn. Scrapping the kids away, he entered the barn, passed across it and opened a door for his does to enter from the other side. He called them inside, collectively and individually, each goat having a name, and once inside going to her own stanchion of her own accord.

Instead of bringing his milking apparatus to the goats when he milks them, as in the case of cows, Woods brings the goats to the apparatus, which consists in part of a platform bearing the appearance of a saw horse with an unusually wide top. A doe, turned loose from her stanchion, scampers to the platform, hops upon it of her accord and receives a fistful of mill feed in the box fastened to the farther end. Woods pulls out a shelf that rests conveniently under the animal's forefeet, places his pail on the platform and milks.

One Real Champion.—"Here's my champion goat," he said proudly as one hopped up. "Her name's Sybil. We've four blue ribbons and one red ribbon at the state fair. Her daughter won a ribbon too."

"See that udder (as the next one came forward). These goats average right around a gallon of milk a day. Some give almost two gallons. A dollar a month feeds one of 'em all she wants, too. A ton of hay and five dollars worth of mill feed lasts me a month for my whole herd."

"This is the best bunch of goats I ever saw," he admitted cheerfully as he took one doe back to her stall. "I went all through California three or four years ago, but I never saw a bunch come up to these."

He opened a gate and a herd of 12 bleating kids came swarming into their special pen. Setting each one individually by the neck, Woods thrust it into his stanchion, which was a tiny affair made of laths. An individual tin pan to each, a cup of milk in the pan and soon the kids presented a voracious gulping sound to the ear and a series of rapidly wagging stubby tails to the eye.

Kids Easily Satisfied.—"That's really all they need," said Woods at the conclusion of the ceremony, but I usually just repeat the dose."

"I raised all but a couple of these from two goats. Started in 1921. Sold seven or eight, too." Leaving his goats for the night, he passed out of his tiny barn into his tinier place of abode. The house where he cooks, eats and sleeps while on the farm was originally a wagon in which some advertising drove his horses and cooking his meals and looking for desirable sites for signs all at the same time. The wagon, now sans whippersnapper, has come to its last resting place on Wood's farm. As in a modern apartment, the owner can at will produce a cupboard, a pantry or even a bed by using the proper device.

Upon entrance there were presented to sight a can of oil, a bar of soap, a stove lid lifter, a box of matches, a corn cob pipe, a nipple.

Food Values High.—"Takes a long time for cream to rise on this milk," said Woods, producing a pail of the liquor from somewhere. "The cells are five times smaller than the cells in cow's milk, that's why it takes 'em

NEW PASTOR DUE HERE BY TONIGHT

Rev. Fred Taylor, new pastor of the First Methodist church, Salem, arrived in Portland early this morning, according to a wire received here, and was expected to arrive in Salem late this afternoon. He gave his farewell sermon at Sioux City, Iowa, last Sunday, and left that city Monday.

Rev. Mr. Taylor has a wife and six children. It is expected from communications from him that his entire family except three children will arrive with him. Several of the children are grown and will remain in the middle west, it is stated.

The family will occupy the Methodist parsonage on State street next the First Methodist church.

Plans have been made to have Rev. Taylor make his first public appearance at prayer meeting at the church tonight.

Bucks Kent Avert

Woods keeps two bucks in a barn by themselves. Leading his visitor in, he denied that there is any justice in a buck goat's reputation as so forth in the humorous story and the comic strip.

"They won't hurt you at all," he said, picking up a nearby cat. "See that one's head, will you?" referring to a bloody spot on the head of one buck, and stroking the cat as it rested against his chest. "They'll butt each other to beat the band, but just treat 'em right and they won't hurt you a bit."

The cat purring vociferously, climbed to his shoulder, and pushed a wet nose into his cheek. Woods grinned. "This is my favorite cat," he said.

He gave each of the bucks a handful of hay, and left them for the night. Unlike the does, there was a slight odor among the bucks. A buck goat produces an odor by gland action, like a skunk, but of a different flavor. The odor is said to be healthful, and according to Woods is used in some parts of Europe as a curative device.

"When are you going to have this printed?" he asked as the reporter bid him goodbye and started down the hill.

"Oh, about tomorrow afternoon, probably."

The man grinned. "Well, my wife'll sure be surprised when she reads it. I ain't gonna tell her nothin' about you comin' up here."

Yesterday was "senior flunk day" at Willamette university. The senior class, gathering at 5 o'clock, went by automobile to Taylor's grove, near Mehama. Returning last night, members of the class insisted that the shower of rain had not inconvenienced them.

Feel All Worn Out?

ARE you dragging around day after day with a dull, constant backache? Do you feel stiff and achy; weak, nervous—all played out?

You should know, then, that these troubles are often due to imperfect kidney action. When the kidneys lag, there's slow poisoning of blood and nerves and an upsetting of the whole system. Your back aches; you have sharp, stabbing pains, headaches, dizzy spells, and often annoying kidney irregularities.

If your kidneys are inactive, help them with a tested diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. They are recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor!

Here is Salem Proof:

Mrs. Ruth Denison, 1540 N. Liberty street, says: "I had attacks of kidney complaint and my back ached. When I awoke I became dizzy and specks floated before my eyes. My kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Pills for these attacks. They helped me right away. The aches and pains left and I was free from the dizziness and other signs of kidney trouble."
