

UNITED STATES EMBASSY HAS NO HOME IN BERLIN

Berlin, April 28.—The lack of a permanent American embassy building in Berlin is a source of wonderment to the German press which has been commenting recently in a humorous vein upon the difficulties a new American ambassador encounters in establishing himself here. The building on Wilhelmplatz used by the government has never succeeded in finding a satisfactory structure for sale within the price fixed by congress.

The present embassy is used both as an office and residence for the ambassador.

The residential section is unfurnished and the widespread knowledge among trades people that every new ambassador means a new set of furnishings, is the cause of no end of annoyance to the embassy staff, which is besieged by merchants of all sorts who want contracts as soon as they hear of a new appointment.

The address of Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the newly chosen ambassador, has been sought eagerly since the announcement that he is to come here and when he arrives he will doubtless be met at the station by large delegations of furniture and carpet dealers.
