day's meeting. Mrs. Winnie Braden, secretary of the Dallas chamber of commerce, was present and announced the action taken by the Dallas board of directors last night. K. S. Hall, Dallas business man, spoke briefly.

"The majority of us are sold on this proposition," said Hall. "In some cases, though, there are some who feel that they don't know quite enough about it yet. Once we can get organized along with Salem we'll be with you 100 per cent. Anything we can do will gladly be done."

Lowner Ralston, also of Dallas, made a short speech, in which he stated that interest in Polk county is running high for the new linen mill, but that there are some who still want to know more of the details. One point raised was that Polk county farmers want to be assured that the fill will furnish them a permanent, steady market for their flax when they grow it. There are a number of Polk county farmers who have grown flax in former years, are experienced in growing the product, but have never had a steady reliable market, Ralston declared.

S. R. Tandy, Aurora real estate man, was present and spoke optimistically about the project. E. G. Robinson of Aurora was present taking in the details of the meting.

Several Salem men spoke, all declaring that the new mill is an assured thing if the workers only go out after subscriptions. "It's going over, there's no question about it," said Fred Thielsen.

"I'm positive this will go over, and go over quickly from now on," said Theodore Roth.

"I believe we can put the matter across," said Dan Fry.

There was talk of parceling the remainder o' Salem's quota among the workers, having each team agree to be responsible for a certain part of the money yet to be raised. In another week, after as much as possible has been secured by the present method, some plan may be worked out in accordance with the suggestion, according to T. M. Hicks, president of the chamber of commerce, who presided at today's meeting.
