

JURY FIXER MAY FACE CHARGE OF COURT CONTEMPT

Chicago, May 23.—A charge of contempt of court faces James C. Callan, North Side politician, accused by Philip J. Barry of attempted jury tampering in the trial of William J. Sheppard on a charge of killing his foster son, William N. McClintock, with typhoid germs.

Callan was arrested last night as he was leaving the offices of his attorney, who throughout yesterday had promised he would surrender his to the state's attorney. He admitted he had been retained as a defense investigator and had talked to Barry but denied making any attempt to influence him.

He knew Barry, Callan said, and merely had asked him if he was a ventriloquist after Barry had first asked him the same question. He was held overnight in a police station and his attorneys said if he was not released before tonight they would seek a writ of habeas corpus. Beyond the investigation of the alleged tampering attempt and search for Robert White, vanished state's witness, the almost completed first week of the trial has produced only four tentative jurors to try Sheppard.

Eighty-five venue-men were examined.

DON'T BET ON HORSES LADY ASTOR'S ADVICE

London, May 23.—(A. P.)—Lady Astor, whose husband's horse, Cross Boy, is one of the favorites for the classic derby next week, has been giving some of her parliamentary constituents in Plymouth the advice not "to bet on that or any other race."

"I never bet and I advise you not to bet," she is quoted as saying. "If people knew as much about horses as I do they would never risk their money on them. A horse may win the derby today and be hopeless tomorrow."

"Horses are the most unreliable creatures on earth. The trainers never put money on them. There is both chance and mischance in the best race ever run and nobody can predict the result."

"You can wish us luck with Cross Boy, but don't put your money on it or any other horse."

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS STAGE COMEDY

The three-act comedy farce "Safety First," was presented to a large audience at the Salem high school auditorium last night. It was the only play of its kind to be staged during the year. It was given by the Knights of Oratory, a society consisting entirely of boys, and every part in the play, down to the most beautiful leading ladies, was taken by a boy. Ezra Webb and Clarence Hamilton both had parts of feminine characters prominent in the plot and both "did their stuff" in a way that proved to be screamingly funny to every member of the audience.

With a college chap trying to marry a Turkish lady, his chum trying to avert the occurrence, and the situation added to by the chums' friends and wife and her friends on the one hand, and the Turkish lady's thunderous father on the other, not to say a ridiculous policeman and his "flaney" in between, the play progressed from one rollicking, hilarious situation to another still more so.

Setting of the stage were attractive and appropriate in appearance. The following assisted in the play:

Faculty advisor, Miss Ada Ross; student manager, Edgar Tibbets; ticket manager, Hugh Adams; re-

LOCALS TO PLAY AT CAMAS SUNDAY

Tomorrow afternoon the Salem Senators will cross bats with the strong Camas nine on the Camas grounds. This will be the second meeting of the two teams and the second game of the season away from home. The locals have received a 4 to 2 decision over the Camas club but "Big" Bill Kusa, star hurler for the Washington team will be in superb form according to announcement and is vowing revenge for the first defeat. Kusa is a mouser of a fellow and has world's stuff, although he is not as invincible as he was when he was allowed the use of his pet "spitter," which is barred in the interstate league. Aillon will be behind the bat for the Camas nine.

Tomorrow's game will start at 2:30 in the announcement of Cuyler Van Patten, president of the board of directors for the locals. He also explains that Camas is only 25 miles from Portland or distance of 77 miles. Many of the fans were desirous of going to the game but thought it too far.

The locals are leading the league with four wins and no losses and are going to work hard to get another win which will give them a good lead. Three teams, Hillsboro, West Linn and Linn team will clash with Vancouver.
