(This referred to a new state prohibition enforcement act.)

"Courage must now give way to a conformity to type, to a sort of spineless corporate opinion which, operated by prohibitions and compulsions aimed to reduce all individuality, whether of mind or character, to a gelatinous and wobbling mass.

"No abuse is too great to be visited upon the hapless individual who still ventures to have a mind and character of his own.

"These new and persecuting barbarians are of a kind with their ancient forbears, who from their seats in the arena gloated with joy as the stricken gladiator or the Christian martyr ended his life in agony. These new barbarians have abandoned Christianity, deserted morality, for the barbaric pleasures of torment and persecution.

"The notion that a majority must have its way whether it matters of opinion or in matters of personal conduct is as pestilent and anti-democratic a notion as can possibly be conceived. The majority has no function whatever in matters of opinion or personal conduct, and have none unless morality to be abandoned. The rule of the majority is simply a working word to decide upon policies in matters of common or general concern."

The president reiterated that America's aim was "a policy of peace through reason rather than force" and that the government in its dealings with the people of this and other nations, the navy must remember that the "dominant traits of mankind are truth and justice and righteousness, and that the appeal to reason must ultimately prevail."

"Though ultimately I believe peace will prevail," he continued, "I have too much knowledge of the history of mankind and too much experience with the traits of human nature to dare to assert that we will never again be engaged in war. It is known of all the world that we have no present or traditional enemies, that we covet no territory, harbor no imperialistic designs, and are not arming ourselves with the expectation of attacking or being attacked. As far as we can look into the future, so far as we can gauge the power and temper of other peoples, there never was a time when it was less likely that any other nation or combination of nations would or could make any attack upon us."

likewise our friendly relations with other peoples and our title to the good opinion of the world, I feel that the occasion will very seldom arise, and I know it does not now exist, when those connected with our navy are justified, either directly or by inference, in asserting that other specified powers are arming against us, and by arousing national suspicion and hatred against them.

"The suggestion that any other people are harboring a hostile intent toward us is a very serious charge to make. We would not relish having our honorable motives and peaceful intentions questioned; others cannot relish having any of us question theirs. We should not forget that in the world over the general attitude and one of the strongest attributes of all peoples is a desire to do right."

As an instrument of peace, Mr. Coolidge gave assurance that the navy would draw adequate support from the federal treasury and he gave support also to voluntary organizations which attempted to advance the welfare of the navy by keeping the public informed "of its true aims and purposes." A strong military establishment alone, he said, would not prevent anyone from ever attempting to mistreat the nation.
