

ALL TEXTBOOKS SAID TO EXPLAIN FERMENTATION

Lincoln, Neb., June 11—If all the school textbooks in use in Nebraska which describe the processes of fermentation, the production of alcohol and the manufacture of intoxicating liquors are to be discarded, nearly every current work on physiology, chemistry and physics will have to go, according to opinions expressed by several persons connected with the state department of education.

State Superintendent Matsen is in receipt of a letter from Elmer E. Thomas of Omaha, federal prohibition director for Nebraska, which encloses a complaint from A. L. Shamblin, superintendent of schools for Blaine county, relative to illustrations of a distilling apparatus and information as to the method by which malt and spirituous liquors are made, contained in a physiology being used there.

The prohibition director said he did not know whether this was an actual violation of the state prohibition law which forbids advertising any receipt or formula for the manufacture of liquor but he thought it contrary to the spirit of the law and believed anything of the kind should be discouraged.

Although the Blaine county official was said to be horrified that any school book should portray how intoxicants are made, the laws of Nebraska make it compulsory to teach "in all schools supported by public money or under state control," the effects of alcoholic drinks and other stimulants and narcotics upon the human system. Text books treat on how alcohol is distilled are thought to be a part of this instruction.

USE OF CONSPIRACY INDICTMENTS CURBED

Washington, June 11—(By Associated Press)—Abolishment of the use by federal district attorneys of conspiracy indictments in misdemeanor cases was recommended by circuit judges who closed a conference here yesterday with Chief Justice Taft.

The judges declared they believed the conspiracy indictments had been grossly abused, especially in prohibition cases and they voted to call the subject to the attention of federal district judges and attorneys and also to congress.

Use of such indictments to convert a joint misdemeanor case into a felony, said the recommendation by the judges, has worked to permit introduction of much improper evidence.
