TWO ARE IN LINE AS SUCCESSORS TO ARCHBISHOP

Portland, June 22.—The successor to the late Archbishop Christie, head of the Roman Catholic see of Oregon, is expected to be either John P. Carroll, bishop of Helena, Mont., or Edward Francis Hoban, bishop of Chicago, according to reports current in Portland.

The appointment will be made at Rome in accordance with church law and will probably be made some time before August 1. It is customary to allow three or four months to elapse before a successor is named. He later took almost three months since the death of Archbishop Christie.

It was expected at the time of the funeral of the archbishop that his successor would be a bishop transferred from an eastern diocese, as elevation from priesthood is comparatively rare. The recent opinions bear out the earlier belief.

Bishop Carroll, said to be under consideration by the pope for the office, delivered the funeral sermon for Archbishop Christie. He has always been a prominent churchman and was at one time president of the St. Joseph's college, Duquesne, Pa. He was educated at St. Raphael's parochial school in that city and later at St. Joseph's college. He later took a degree at the Grand seminary, Montreal. He was ordained a priest in 1889 and became president of his own college five years later.

He has been bishop of Helena for 21 years, during which he has been actively identified in all affairs of the church organization. Bishop Hoban, the other whose name is mentioned for the position of archbishop of Oregon City, is at present in Rome. He is younger than Bishop Carroll, and was consecrated bishop in 1921. His early education was at St. Ignace college, Chicago. He studied theology at the St. Mary's seminary, Baltimore, and at the Gregorian university, Rome. He was ordained priest in 1902.

He has been chancellor of the archdiocese of Chicago since 1909.

2000 GATHER AT SUNDAY SCHOOL MEET SATURDAY

"The more you're up on a thing, the less you are down on it," said Fred Lockley, feature writer for the Oregon Journal, in a speech before the Marion county Sunday school activities comes for the most part from those not familiar with the Sunday school and its purposes, Lockley maintained. He was introduced by Dr. Frank Brown of Salem.

There were approximately 2000 delegates at the convention. Mrs. Jean Johnson of Portland was present and made a short talk, introducing a Chemawa Indian girl, who made a five-minute speech which was pronounced by some to be the best of the day.

The program followed a basket dinner, served at noon. Rev. B. J. Kimber, Marion county Y. M. C. A. secretary, led a general song fest. In the athletic events, which followed the program, the entire group present was divided into two sides, the purple and the greens. Those with birthdays of odd days of the month were classed with the greens, the others being purples. They were tagged with ribbons by girls of the First Presbyterian church of Salem.

Children engaged in genuine contests. The adults staged a burlesque track meet. The so-called foot race consisted of measuring the contestant's foot. No record was made of the winner's name in the broad jump measurements were taken of the grin which the contestants was able to register. In the shot put each athlete threw a balloon.

All activities connected with the convention were staged inside the stadium at the fair grounds except the picnic lunch and the outdoor baseball games. It was claimed that the United Brethren Sunday school of Salem had the largest delegation on hand being represented by 40 members. Practically every vicinity in the county was represented by a delegation.

AUTHOR AND EXPLORER INJURED BY LEOPARD

Nairobi, British East Africa, June 22.—Although Stewart Edward White, the American writer, received some nasty gashes in his recent encounter with a wounded leopard, while hunting big game in the Tanganyika region, the wounds are healing well, and he intends to continue on his expedition. The incident, according to details just received, occurred near Kilimanjaro. Although the party hunts in native style, with bows and arrows, rifles are taken as a precaution. Mr. White was accompanied by a native gun bearer and a native boy. Apparently the leopard had followed the gun bearer, who was attacked and badly mauled. The boy followed with a rifle which he fired, diverting the leopard's attention from the gun bearer, but the boy himself was then mauled.

Mr. White dashed to the scene and fired again, wounding the animal, which sprang at him, tearing his left arm and shoulder. The author was able to unshackle his hunting knife and kill the leopard.

FISH COMMISSION OUSTS MITCHELL AS HATCHERY HEAD

he is expected to rule on it this week. Mitchell was the last of the state fish organization gotten together by Carl D. Shoemaker as master fish warden. One by one they have been replaced with men either favored by Governor Pierce or to whom Pierce was obligated politically, as is believed to have been the case with Clanton. Mitchell was employed when the commission was composed of Fred P. Kendall, Dr. Thomas W. Ross and W. T. Eakin. His contract provided that he be employed for four years and receive a salary of $350 a month. When Governor Pierce removed Ross from the commission and finally won out in court on the question of his right to remove Ross, he appointed John C. Veatch, Portland attorney, in Ross' place. Recently he appointed Beals in Kendall's place. It was Veatch, Eakin and Beals who ousted Mitchell. Veatch presided over the meeting. Eakin introduced the resolution giving Mitchell a 60-day leave of absence, at the end of which time his services will be terminated, and motion to adopt the resolution was seconded by Beals. Clanton is to receive the same salary, $350 a month, that he paid Mitchell.

Dr. Ross, the former commissioner, in an interview given out in Portland, declares that Mitchell has been double-crossed by Governor Pierce. Ross declares that he was promised when a member of the commission, that if Mitchell were employed no action would be taken at any time to remove him for political reasons. Ross accuses Pierce of breaking his promise that the fish commission would be kept out of politics.

Ross says that when he went into office as a member of the commission he promised R. E. Clanton that he would help him regain his place as director of hatcheries, but that he later decided that Clanton was not of high enough executive calibre and informed Pierce that he had changed his mind about getting him back on the state payroll. Ross says he told the governor of the opportunity to employ Mitchell, and it was then that Pierce agreed to this and promised that politics should not interfere with Mitchell's tenure of office.

The governor, says Ross, let things run along until Clanton began to pull wires at the last session of the legislature. "Clanton helped the governor in several of his fights," says Ross, "and in return demanded that he be restored to his old job as director of hatcheries. The governor agreed to this." Ross predicts that the state will be the loser by the change that has been made. He praises the work of Mitchell during the period he has been a member of the commission. Mitchell, it is understood, has already received several good offers and is not disposed to make a fight to keep this state job.

Clanton says that he will make few changes in the personnel of his department.
