Kelso Stirred Over Death Threat Made By Shabby Gunman

Kelso, Wash., June 23.—An other mystery that has served to stir the people of Kelso, who already were aroused by the shooting to death last Friday night of Thomas Dosty newspaper publisher, has been made public by Luke S. May, criminologist employed by Coville county to investigate the Dosty murder.

The new development involves Woodrich, a salesman for a motor company, who alleges he was stopped by an unknown man at the point of a gun at Third and Columbia streets, Kelso, 11:30 o'clock Sunday night and ordered to sign a paper, the contents of which he did not know.

On Woodrich's refusal to sign the unknown man walked away with the threat "you will sign these papers before this time tomorrow night, or follow in the footsteps of another," according to Woodrich's story.

The man was described by Woodrich as more than six feet tall, wearing a brown suit of shabby appearance, dark coat hat, gray flannel shirt, black shoes.

May said today that he discounted the partial identification made yesterday of the .41 caliber revolver found near the body of Dosty.

"We have as yet found nothing tangible to work with," said May. James Spooner of West Kelso, yesterday partially identified the weapon as one he formerly owned.

The investigation is being conducted by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney R. J. Quinn in cooperation with May.

A. Hurie Todd, former mayor, who returned yesterday and claimed the recall election which recently removed him from office was illegal, delayed today issuance of a proclamation formally claiming the office. He said he was waiting for the arrival of his attorney, John Casey, from Seattle.

SHEPHERD ON STAND DENIES ALL CHARGES

art, Shepherd's chief counsel, after the usual identifying questions.

Denials Are Vicious. "I did not," Shepherd replied in a firm, well modulated voice. The defense attorney took Shepherd through each charge in the indictment, 23 counts covering the death of McClintock by poison, germs and an "unknown manner."

In each instance the defendant answered a firm "I did not."

In three minutes, Shepherd's general denial of each and every accusation against him had been formally entered and Stewart sat down with a remark "take the witness."

The defense rested its case at 2:30 p. m. after Shepherd was excused from the witness stand.

The cross-examination was concluded in four minutes after the afternoon session was resumed. The prosecutor did not ask a question regarding the illness or death of Billy McClintock, nor query as to Faiman, Marchand, the letter Shepherd is alleged to have written to Faiman's school or the school itself.

Shepherd obviously was astonished as the prosecutor remarked: "That's all."

The court room was taken by surprise and gasped.

The greatest crowd of the entire trial had struggled for entrance to head the remainder of the Shepherd cross-examination.

Only Five Minutes. Five minutes sufficed for arranging for the division of time for arguments and George E. Gorman, first assistant state's attorney immediately began the first of the arguments to the jury.

It was agreed there would be time limits on the addresses to the jury. Mr. Gorman said he would talk about three hours, however.

He will be followed by William Scott Stewart, assistant defense counsel. Mr. W. O'Brien, Stewart's partner, will be the third speaker and Mr. Crowe will close the case for the state.

In concluding the cross-examination of Shepherd, Prosecutor Crowe asked only a few questions regarding the property Shepherd had indicated he wanted his foster son to give him and about a letter Shepherd wrote to Miss Estelle Gehling a young nurse.

BOND SALESMEN ARRESTED ON WIRE FROM LOS ANGELES

firm. Their compensation was to be by salary and commission. According to their story they turned in the proceeds of their sales and claim the amount allowed them as commission was less by several hundred dollars than they should have received. To square up, the next time they had any money to turn in, the first deducted their commission instead of leaving that for the employers to do, and then left the city, but first notifying their employers of their intention.

There is some question as to the legality of the arrest. Although the apprehension on instructions from Los Angeles is in accordance with the practice of most police departments, there is some contention that an arrest should not be made until requisition is made on the governor for the return of the person wanted, whereupon the governor should issue a warrant for the arrest.

In the case of the men held here no warrant was placed into the hands of the local officers, but there is a warrant in Los Angeles.

W. S. Clark of Albany was in Salem yesterday on private business.

William Leith of Jefferson made a brief business trip to Salem yesterday.
