SHEPHERD IS HELD VICTIM

Stewart talked for thirty minutes after George E. Gorman, first assistant state's attorney, had concluded the prosecution's opening plea, a demand for the death penalty.

Stewart worked himself into a frenzy as he pleaded for Shepherd. Many pieces of evidence which Shepherd was not questioned about yesterday were held up by Gorman as "uncontradicted evidence in this case; Shepherd did not deny them when he was on the witness stand and was given an opportunity."

Flight is Alleged.
The Shepherds' visit to friends at Albuquerque, N. M., shortly after Billy's death was termed by Gorman as "flight inspired by a guilty conscience."

"He wanted to put as much distance between himself and the scene of his crime as was possible," Gorman shouted.

Shepherd's conversation with Miss Isabelle Pope, Billy's fiancée, about Billy's last hours and its effect upon the youth's physical condition "was the voice of a guilty conscience," declared the assistant state's attorney.

"Folman came to realize that the game was not worth the $100,000 promised," Gorman said concerning the state's chief witness and confessed accomplice of Shepherd. "It was his guilty conscience which prompted him to change his denials to an admission of the facts that he had helped Shepherd. And Folman tells you he did give Shepherd those germs."

Defends Folman.
"If he did not why did he so testify? I can understand why a friend would go on the witness stand and swear to a lie to save a friend from the rope, but why if history was not true would Folman come here and swear to a story he knew would send Shepherd to the gallows?"

"Folman said he got the germs from the city health department, gave them to Shepherd and taught him how to kill Billy McClintock with them, and he did it," shouted Gorman.

The prosecutor had been talking an hour when a recess interrupted him. It was indicated he would resume the end of his address to the jury. William Scott Stewart, of defense counsel, was ready to open for his client.

The prosecutor Tuesday stressed the states contention of a motive for the alleged murder. He brought out that Billy had directed the Northern Trust company to dispose of the Shepherd-McClintock home, and then read from Shepherd's letter to the girl:

Says Letter A Lie
"Things have come along like a cyclone since seeing you at noon. Cannot go into all of the details. The deal came to a head and broke me flat; absolutely bankrupt; no hope for the future. I think that I will close my office here and drift away from it all."

"What was that deal," asked Crowe.

"There was none, especially," replied Shepherd.

"That was a lie, was it?" "It was," replied Shepherd, and the prosecutor's "that's all" ended the cross-examination.

On re-direct examination, Shepherd said he had advised Billy to sell the home piece.

Details of the conversation were left out, however, when the state's attorney objected to relating a talk with a man now dead.

"Judge Crowe asked you whether or not you had any medicine bottles out there and your answer was 'not in that room.' Did you have medicine bottles in other parts of the house?" asked Stewart.

"Did you have a laboratory anywhere about the premises?" "I did," was the reply.

Answers Queries
"Judge Crowe asked you whether or not you considered it ethical for a lawyer in a fiduciary capacity to draw a will, and you answered you did not. Isn't that true?"

"Yes." "Were you in any fiduciary capacity with reference to that will?"

"Only as foster father of the boy." "And at whose request did you act as lawyer?" "At his."

"I object to that—a conversation with a dead man," interjected Crowe, as the defense sought to bring out what Billy had said.

"All right; that is all; that's our case," replied Stewart.

"State rests," stated Mr. Crowe and after 12 days the presentation of evidence was ended.

Demands Death Penalty
In almost the first words of its opening address to the jury, the state demanded the death penalty for William D. Shepherd, accused of the murder of William McClintock.

"It is up to you, gentlemen of the jury, to fix the punishment in this case, 14 years to life imprisonment, or death," said George E. Gorman, first assistant state's attorney.

"We contend, however, that this murder was so brutal that there is but one penalty which would be proper, and that is the death penalty."

ANSWER FILED IN TRADEMARK CONTROVERSY

A stiff legal battle over the priority of a trademark registration in the federal patent office and a registration under the Oregon corporation law is promised in the circuit court here with the filing this morning by the Pendleton Packing and Provision company of a demurrer to the complaint of John Morrel and company of Attumwa, Iowa. The Iowa packing firm is seeking to compel Sam A. Kozar, secretary of state, to register their trademark of "Pride" against the prior registration of the Oregon firm of "Oregon Pride." A motion to strike the complaint was filed several days ago on behalf of the state department.

The demurrer of the Pendleton firm alleges as grounds for their plea, that the complaint fails to state the cause of action, that the defendant has no prior right to use of the mark, that the single word "pride" cannot be appropriated as a trademark, and that the defendant is not guilty of unfair competition. The state department had previously filed to strike the complaint with the opinion that the case should first be contested between the Morrell and Pendleton companies and that the secretary of state was not a proper defendant to the suit.

In its complaint the Iowa firm declared that in April 1924 it had received a registration permit from the bureau of federal patents for their trademark, and that in Oct. 1923 application had been made to Secretary of State Kozar for a permit for the use of the name in Oregon but that this permit had been denied.

CRISIS NEAR IN CHINESE SITUATION

although a London newspaper prints reports insisting that there has been trouble in Mukden.

It developed that the British consul general at Canton warned the Chinese authorities Monday prior to yesterday's shooting that any attempt by Chinese to enter the foreign settlement at Canton would be forcibly resisted, and that the Chinese government would be held responsible for the consequences.

Europeans Killed
Canton, June 24.—(By Associated Press)—Several Europeans were killed and many others wounded today when fighting broke out between Chinese agitators and residents of Shamen, the foreign concession here. Women and children are fleeing on the U. S. S. Asheville, preparing to leave for Hongkong tonight. The situation is extremely serious.

The outbreak today came after demonstrators fired in the direction of Shamen yesterday killing a non-combatant Frenchman, R. Pasquier and injuring Commissioner of Customs Edwards and V. G. Murrell, a chemist. The latter was shot in the arm. Edwards was wounded in the knee.

It is impossible to foresee the outcome of the present trouble, which, apparently will last for some time.

London, June 24.—(By Associated Press)—Colonial Secretary Amery told the house of commons today that the British government has the Hongkong situation well in hand and is able to preserve law and order there.

Foreign Secretary Chamberlain was asked whether he had evidence that disturbances in China have been fostered or aggravated by agents of another government. He replied affirmatively, but did not specify the government to which he referred.

NAVAL RADIO DEMANDED ON ARCTIC SHIPS

rushed from Wiscasset, Maine, to Sydney, Nova Scotia, where the Perry is anchored and Lieutenant commander Byrd, in charge of the naval detachment with the expedition, has been instructed to have it put into service.

The expedition sailed with a short wave radio set installed by a private corporation. The navy department said today this apparatus had developed trouble.

It was the original intention to install the standard navy long wave equipment, but apparently orders to that effect did not reach Commander Byrd and the set was not taken aboard at Boston. The apparatus then was shipped to Wiscasset by motor truck, where it was again left behind.

Sydney, N. S., June 24.—The Perry, first of the MacMillan Arctic expedition ships has arrived here after a foggy three days trip from Wiscasset, Maine.

The vessel is awaiting the arrival tonight of the Howden, in command of Donald B. MacMillan. Both vessels will take on fuel. Departure for the expedition base at Etah, Greenland, will depend upon the time required for fueling.

The Perry is carrying United States navy officers and the three amphibian airplanes with which the Arctic will be explored. The ship left Wiscasset last Saturday. The Howden stopped at Monhegan Island, Maine and followed the Perry last Sunday. The area between the pole and North America in which MacMillan hopes to find another continent is also to be explored by Ronald Amundsen. Undaunted by his recent failure to fly over the pole with Lincoln Ellsworth, Amundsen, dispatches from Norway says, believes there is land on the North American side of the pole and proposes to discover it.

ROTARY HEARS PLUMBERS PLANS

A national advertising campaign is being begun by plumbers throughout the United States in an effort to increase the use of plumbing equipment in the country, according to statement made by C. C. Newkirk, field secretary of the Master Plumbers' association of northern California, in a speech before the Salem Rotary club this noon. Mr. Newkirk has been attending the national plumbers convention at Portland.

A number of physicians have been secured to lecture in various parts of the country on the subject "A Bath a Day," he stated.

He produced statistics to show the individual health, including infant mortality, is found to be directly proportional to the modernness of the plumbing used in the home. He assailed the practice commonly used in construction, that of calling for bids on plumbing, stating that the practice often results in cheap work being done, with results that are detrimental from a health standpoint.

Mayor Gleay and several members of the city council were present at the luncheon.

Engineers Inspect Plants.
Portland, Or. June 24.—The regional convention of the American Engineers, in session here, split into separate parties again today, some inspecting sawmill operations at Longview, Wash., and Vernonia, Or., and others the dock and port developments at Portland.
