Phillip's weekly report, issued today, shows that 387 men and 49 women, a total falling just 4 short of 450, applied for work at the office during the week ending today. The week's record shows that 217 applied for work and 280 were requested by employers. One hundred and seventy one men were referred, and of that number 159 were successfully placed. In the field of common labor 43 men asked for work, and exactly the same number of employers asked for help. Thirty one men were referred to jobs, and 29 were successfully placed. Among the women 43 agricultural laborers registered their applications for work, and 57 workers were requested by employers. Thirty six were referred and 33 were placed. The remainder of the week's activity so far as woman workers was concerned was slight, all of it being among hotel and restaurant workers.

JARDINE TELLS FUNDAMENTALS OF MARKETING

Portland, Ore., June 27.—(A. P.)—William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture outlined what he termed the three fundamental principles of group marketing in a luncheon speech at the chamber of commerce here today. Secretary Jardine arrived in Portland shortly before noon on his tour of the coast where he is studying farm conditions.

After attending a meeting of the Agricultural club of Oregon, Secretary Jardine was to leave tonight for eastern Oregon to meet farmers and inspect some of the large wheat districts.

Mr. Jardines three principles follow:

A particular plan for a particular commodity; honest, efficient and experienced managers and a loyal membership which knows how the organization operates. Basic problems cannot be solved by legislation, he said. Laws, he averred, can be nothing more than shock absorbers. He said marketing problems must be solved by individual communities with farmers and business men working together.

"I do not need to emphasize the importance of your timber lands and your timber crop," said Secretary Jardine, turning to another subject.

"Something over one-third of the total remaining stands of saw timber in the United States lies in Oregon and Washington. This is a priceless heritage, but it cannot continue to be enjoyed in proper measure unless effective thought is applied to the problem of keeping every acre of permanent forest land productive.

"This region has an oportunity to make forestry—that is, permanent timber production—part of its program before its virgin forests are gone.

"Nearly 23,000,000 acres of land in Oregon and more than 15,000,000 acres in Washington are classified as permanent forest land—useful for growing no other crop but timber.

"The Clarke-McNary act, which is largely the result of the thoughtful attention and earnest efforts by your Senator McNary, recognizes the obligation on the part of the public to help finance the protection of state and private lands, and it is our belief that the state and federal government together should bear about half the cost of protection of such lands, relying on private ownership to meet the other half.

"It is my wish to see the contribution of the federal government under this program brought up to its fair proportion as rapidly as possible."

INSTRUCTIONS ON DEFENSE DAY TESTS ISSUED

Defense test committees and individual workers throughout the state are asked to concentrate energetically on oral enrollments of groups of citizens as one-day Defense Test Day, July Fourth, in another bulletin of instructions just issued by the Defense Test committee for Oregon, through Brigadier-General George A. White, chairman.

"As the time remaining for enrollment of one-day volunteers is so short," says the bulletin, "the utmost energy by all mayors' committees, organizations and individual workers is essential.

"The immediate response to suggestions for the oral enrollment en masse of groups of citizens is encouraging. However, many thousands of additional enrollments are required to make certain that Oregon's Defense Test quota of 30,000 is attained.

"Committees therefore are urged to have a speaker at every public or semi-public to arise, and swear them in as one-day volunteers, using the form of oath shown in Bulletin No. 1, previously mailed you."

That proper credit may be given both to committees and individuals for their efforts, and to the state quota by the War Department, daily reports of such oral enrollments are asked.

The Portland lodge of Elks, with 400 enrolling at one meeting, and Scout Young Camp No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, are cited for the honor of being the first organizations in the state to join the army of defense test volunteers. Among other enrollments mentioned is that of seven Medford pastors, including the president of the Medford Ministerial association, who took the oath of enlistment in front of brigade headquarters of the national guard, camp Jackson.

The first individual worker to receive a citation is Second Lieutenant Alex M. Rankin, Q. M., Res., of Salem, as the first reserve officer to send in the quota of 25 signed enrollments, in addition to oral enrollments, assigned each reserve officer.

"His energy and enthusiasm in performance of duty is recommended to all other reserve corps officers," says the bulletin. "If all perform the assignments with the same zeal, Oregon will go many thousand over the top."

Notice is given of the removal of headquarters of the Oregon defense test committee from Camp Jackson, at Medford, to the Masonic building, Salem, to which reports should be forwarded after June 26.
